Space World nears

Seen here is Richard Sullivan, Huron township treasurer, observing Dr. Philip Austin, president of "Space World Inc.," placing a sold sign on one of the first parcels of land to be secured for the coming "Space World Theme Park" in Huron Township. A month ago a few dissidents again failed in their attempt to obtain an injunction to halt Space World's Inc. progress on the project. The judge decided that based on the information presented, there was no cause for placing any injunction against the project. Dr. Austin said "the project is Go, Go, Go."

New strict rules force move

18 City CETA workers face layoff by Oct. 1

By BOB AMEEN
ANP Staff Writer

Unless Congress relaxes strict rules imposed this year, up to 18 city of Romulus employees now being paid under funds from the Comprehensive Employment Training Act (CETA) face layoffs by Oct. 1, 1979.

The layoffs will affect those CETA employees who have been working in job classifications prior to April 1, 1978, said Pat Hogan, community development director.

"Although in the past CETA employees were considered temporary, many stayed on the job for two, three or even four years," Hogan explained.

However, new tough regulations laid down this year by CETA puts Romulus and many other communities in an almost impossible position.

Whereas in the past, Romulus could pay employees $4.81 per hour from CETA funds and increase that amount by any sum it wished, today the situation is different. Under Title II stipulations, the city cannot increase the $4.81 per hour figure, and under Title VI, it can only pay an additional $1,000 annually.

This puts yearly salaries at $10,000 under Title II and $11,000 under Title

VI. Since all city employees earn more than $11,000 yearly, Hogan said, the city has its hands tied, as CETA specifies its employees cannot earn less than regular city workers. Also, since all of its employees make more than $11,000 annually, the city cannot create a new job position that pays less than this amount to meet the CETA regulation, Hogan said.

He said the city has two options: find money, possibly from the general fund, to pay CETA personnel or lay them off.

Three possible solutions suggest themselves, Hogan pointed out. They are: 1) Congress could reenact its anti-recessionary program and, if sufficient funds are forthcoming, the city could keep part of or all of the 18 affected CETA employees; 2) Congress could change or alter CETA regulations, but that possibility does not seem likely this year; 3) city could declare that laying off CETA workers would create a hardship and be granted a waiver allowing them to keep part of or all of the 18 affected personnel.

Hogan said that in the fiscal year beginning Oct. 1, 1978 and ending Sept. 30, 1979, Romulus has been allocated $600,000 in CETA funds, but that the new strict rules prevent it from spending roughly a third of that sum to keep its 18 CETA employees.

Expert says industry needed to create jobs, ease tax load

A prominent building developer and contractor recommended how Romulus could attract more industry to ease the tax load on city residents and to shore up what he called the highest unemployment rate in the surrounding area.

H.F. Campbell of Belleville, president of the H.F. Campbell Construction Co. of Detroit, made his remarks recently before members of the Greater Romulus Chamber of Commerce at the Sheraton Inn.

Campbell, whose firm has done work throughout the United States, Russia and Europe, stressed the importance of proper site selection, access to transportation, right type of soil and the availability of water and sewer connections.

Citing research being done by his company on computers to determine the proper steps to lure industry to a given area, he told how successful Westland has been with its industrial park.

Campbell declared Romulus "was missing the boat" on getting new industries, while its neighbors reaped big rewards from new firms locating in their midst.

He asserted Romulus taxpayers were suffering because local industry was not picking up a large enough share of the tax burden.

In the annual election of officers, Gary Bingamen was selected president of the chamber. He and other members elected will be inducted at the chamber's Livelihood Luncheon May 23 at the Hilton Inn in Romulus. The luncheon will be held in conjunction with Michigan Week in Romulus.

Westland woman victim

One killed, 3 hurt in 3-car collision

A Westland woman was killed and at least three other persons injured Thursday in a three-car collision at Middlebelt and Wick roads in Romulus.

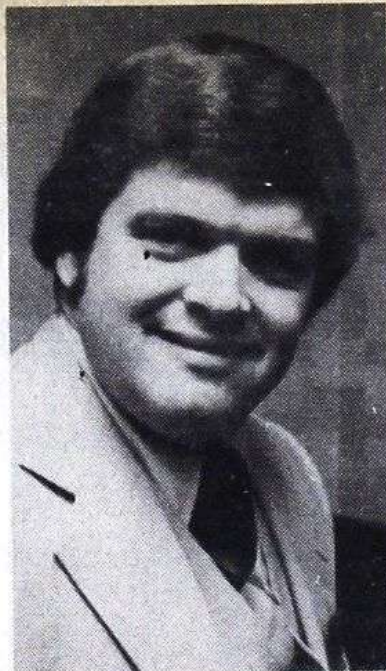

Dead on arrival at Wayne County General Hospital was Mrs. Mary Y. Taracks, 41.

According to the Wayne County Sheriff's Department, Mrs. Taracks automobile was traveling south on Middlebelt about 9:45 a.m. when an oncoming car crossed the center line, struck a second car and then smashed headon into her vehicle.

Name of the driver, who resides in Taylor, is being withheld pending the issuance of a warrant, police said. Nature of the charge was not specified.

Injured in the first car struck was the driver, Ronald Lehman, 32, of Westland, who was taken to Wayne County General Hospital and treated; and Patricia Kesteloot, 23, of Westland, and Diane Petersen, 19, of Romulus, who were treated by a private physician.

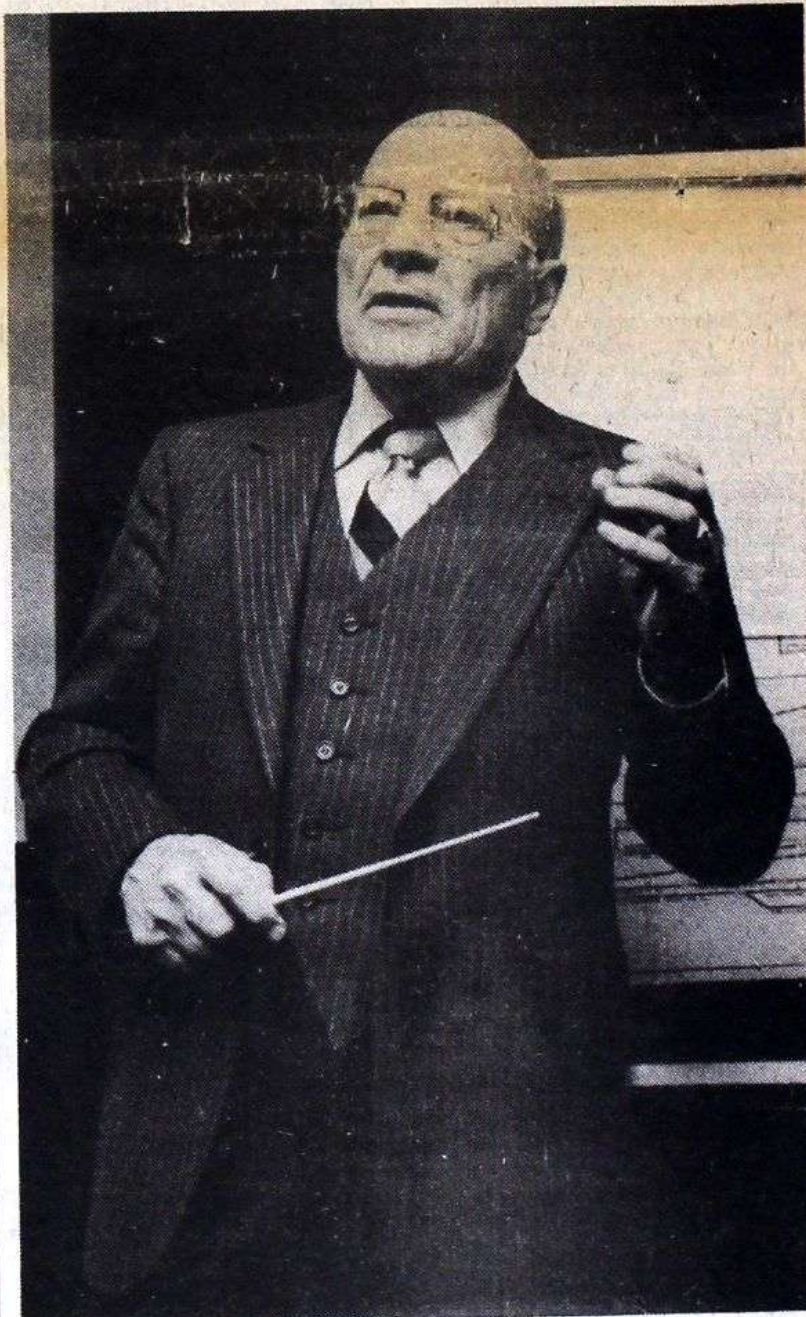

GARY BINGAMEN

Romulus man parade head

A Romulus man this year is commander of the Allied Veterans Council which sponsors the Memorial Day parade in the Wayne-Westland communities.

Roy Williams heads the five area veteran organizations, consisting of the American Legion, Amvets, Disabled American Veterans and two VFW posts - Harris Kehrner and Ed Bova.

Williams and his staff have selected Milton Kolarov of the American Legion Wayne Post 111, as parade marshal and master of ceremonies of the Memorial Day observances.

Urges more industry

H.F. Campbell, president of H.F. Campbell Construction Co. of Detroit, tells members of the Greater Romulus Chamber of Commerce last week that city is lagging behind in attracting new industry and gave a few tips on how it should be done.

Best student mechanic

Richard Giesler placed first in the recent state auto mechanics skills contest at Western Michigan University. He is a student in the automotive program at Romulus Senior High School and is a member of VICA (Vocational Industrial Clubs of America). VICA conducts skill contests for vocational students for regional, state, national and international levels. Richard, after placing second in the regional competition held at Washtenaw Community College, took a first place at the state level held at Western Michigan University. He and his instructor, David Heath, will be traveling to Atlanta, Ga. in July to represent Michigan at the national automotive skill contest.

Romulus to host clerks meet

Some 50 clerks from throughout Wayne County will elect new officers and discuss new absentee ballot procedures April 30 at the annual meeting of the Wayne County Municipal and Township Clerks Association in Romulus.

Romulus Clerk Leonard J. Folmar said his office will serve as host for the meeting at the Hilton Inn.

Permanent absentee ballot applications and the direct mailing of absentee ballots, both new measures, will occupy a major portion of the group's agenda for the one-day session, Folmar explained.

"Under permanent absentee ballot applications," he said, those applications will be in effect from then on, meaning that those residents who vote absentee will not have to apply each time an election is held.

This procedure and the direct mailing of absentee ballots will save money both for the city and for the taxpayers, he said.

With Mayor William M. Oakley scheduled to be out of the city, Mayor Pro Tem Mary Ann Banks will welcome the delegation on behalf of the city.

Folmar said many city businesses will be contacted by Sharon Walker, a member of his office staff, to solicit door prizes for the clerks' meeting, thereby extending both the hospitality of the city and industry.

Folmar, who is legislative chairman of the county clerks association, will present a report on the recent legislative conference of the organization in Lansing. At that session, clerks from all over Michigan met with Wayne County legislators to investigate ways of working together on pending legislation affecting the functions of clerks' offices.

Folmar said special credit should be given to Sharon Walker and Betsy Brown in his office. Walker is soliciting door prizes for the forthcoming annual meeting at the Hilton Inn and Brown organized and made arrangements for the Lansing conference and is also working on the annual meeting in Romulus.

Realizing a dream

'Big Run': Reflections of the Boston Marathon

ED NOTE:
Mr. James Fassett, currently residing in Farmington, N.M., is a native of Dearborn, Mich.
In 1978, Fassett's dream to run in the Boston Marathon became a reality when he joined upwards of 4,000 runners in the 26 mile 385 yard annual run.
For both runners and non-runners alike, Fassett provides a view of the Boston Marathon normally reserved only for those who have traversed the course to the staccato echo of pounding feet.
A view of the Boston Marathon, as provided by the brother of ANP's Managing Editor:

By JIM FASSETT

Listen my children and you shall hear
Of the midnight ride of Paul Revere,
On the eighteenth of April, in Seventy-five;
Hardly a man is now alive
Who remembers that famous day and year.
Longfellow was right. Hardly a man (or woman) today does remember that famous day and year, even though most of us do remember that the Boston silver-smith saw the signal lights in the tower of the Old North Church and took horse to warn the populous that the British were coming. The next day, April 19 — now observed as Patriot's day in New England — saw the fight for freedom begin at the little bridge at Concord.
From its beginning, in 1897 until the early part of this decade, the Boston Marathon was held on April 19. Following that year April 19, Patriot's Day was decreed to occur on the third Monday of April of each year and the Boston Marathon went along.

Beginning in Athens
The marathon, as a modern sporting event, began in Athens with the first Olympic Games in 1896. The distance at that time was about 22 miles. The event was, of course, named for the Plain of Marathon on the east coast of Greece, where legend has it Pheidippides, a champion Greek olympic runner, dropped dead after running from Marathon to Athens to report that the battle of Marathon had been won. I am convinced that this story must be, at least in part, apocryphal — conditioned runners don't drop dead from exertion. If Pheidippides did indeed drop dead at the end of his run, it was more likely because of something he ate along the way.

At any rate, the first American marathon was held in New York in 1896, followed by the first "Boston" in 1897. That race followed generally the same route as today's course, starting in the western suburbs and ending in the heart of the city. The distance for the race in its early days was somewhat variable. The Boston from 1897 to 1923 had a length of 24 miles, 1232 yards; other marathons held in other places were either longer or shorter. Finally, in 1924 the Boston distance was standardized at its present accepted length of 26 miles, 385 yards.

From 15 to 3,000
During its 81 year history, the Boston has changed. Not only is the distance different, but more significantly the number of participants has skyrocketed from a modest 15 in the beginning to more than 3,000 this past April. The rise in numbers has not been steady. Up until 1964, the number had not exceeded 300 runners; by 1969 this number had increased to 1,335. In 1970 the first entry limit of four hours or under for a previous marathon was imposed, and 1,011 starters showed up. In 1971, the entry limit was lowered to 3½ hours and the field decreased to 887. In 1973, the field was back up to 1,384. Finally in 1974, the entry limit was dropped to its present level of three hours for men under 40 and 3½ hours for men over 40 and women.

Arrival in Boston

We flew into Boston Saturday evening. Logan International Airport is located on the shores of Boston Harbor. Our 747 flew eastward over Charleston, East Boston, out over the harbor and then turned back westward toward the city with the lights of the waterfront and harbor islands mirrored in the twinkling waters below. The approach to Logan is all over water so that as the plane dropped lower and lower we had the uneasy feeling that at any moment we would splash down in the bay; at the last moment, however, the runway appears out the side window and we are safely down.

Boston is a small big city, partly because the actual downtown is concentrated so nicely in a fairly small geographic area, and partly because the public transportation system is so good. Between the subway system and busses you go nearly anywhere downtown in 10 minutes or so for 25 cents. And everywhere, the sense of history, of what happened in this place, these now slightly more than 200 years ago, is an ever present aura. From nearly anywhere on the east side, the spire of the Old North Church is a prominent landmark as are the mast and rigging of the USS Constitution.

We were the first bus to arrive and when I followed the crowd into the Hopkinton High School gym I saw that across the wall at the end were taped a series of placards with numbers scrawled on them and beneath each card was a box full of manila envelopes. The arriving runners were forming into lines in front of the numbered cards.

After about an hour, the lines began to move quickly and soon I was at the front receiving my official packet containing my official Boston Marathon number, four safety pins with which to attach the number to the front of my shirt, and a baggage tag to reclaim my gear when, and if, I ever got back to Boston.

For the next two hours or so, I wandered about the high school grounds trying to take in as much of the Hopkinton scene as possible. There were, of course, runners everywhere, sitting in the halls inside the school, sitting along the walls outside the school, standing in long lines behind the two portable toilets behind the school, standing in lines at the drinking fountains, scattered through the woods behind the school, and running, walking, stretching, talking, and laughing all over the athletic field behind the school.

At around 11:30, I thought I'd start over toward the starting line. I didn't know exactly where it was, but as I went through the gate out of the high school grounds there was a flow of runners moving along and I joined the stream. We moved along at a leisurely pace for about a quarter of a mile to a point where the flow slowly came to a halt and I could see ahead where the starting line must be over the heads of the massed 1,000 or so runners ahead of

In recognition of

Congressman William D. Ford (D-15th District) has received an award for his "outstanding service to higher education." The presentation of an engraved silver bowl was made April 9 in Washington, D.C., by Robben Fleming (left), president of the Corporation for Public Broadcasting and former president of the University of Michigan, on behalf of the Council for Advancement and Support of Education (CASE). Rep. Ford was cited particularly for his leadership in enacting the Middle Income Student Assistance Act. This landmark legislation extended basic grant eligibility to at least 1 million additional students with family incomes up to $25,000. He continues this Congress as chairman of the Subcommittee on Postsecondary Education. Elected to the 89th Congress in 1964, Rep. Ford is now serving his eighth term. Based in Washington, D.C., CASE is the professional association for alumni administrators, educational fund raisers, managers of advancement programs, and officers in institutional relations, government relations, periodicals, and publications.

VB residents in camps

Japanese imprisonment is U. S. disgrace

(Editor's note: The following short feature story was written by Lois Morioka about the experiences of her husband, Ted, and his family during World War II when, because they were of Japanese ancestry, were imprisoned for several years behind barbed wire in camps in the United States. Ted and Lois Morioka moved to Van Buren Township in 1965 with their three children. His brother, George, his wife, Helen, and their family moved to Van Buren Township in 1964.)

By LOIS MORIOKA
Guest Writer

He was 24 years old when he left the little rented farm in the shadow of the blue Olympic Mountains, where he had grown up. It was May, Mothers' Day weekend. He, his parents, his three sisters, and his two brothers packed their suitcases; the orders had said they could bring only what they could carry by hand, said goodbye to the dog, Sport, and their home. A neighbor drove them to the train tracks, where an ancient train stood, waiting. The soldiers were there with their rifles and fixed bayonets. Neighbors were there, a few neighbors, who had not been swayed by the hysterical propaganda of the movies and radio and the press.

The travelers were there, carrying whatever they could lug in their arms. Some of them could only carry a baby. Pastebord tags dangled from coats and jackets ... and baby blankets. Each tag was printed with a family number.

Family number 17122; eight times the soldier called it out as the young man climbed on board the train with his parents and his sisters and brothers. When the train was loaded, the guards with their guns and bayonets got on board, too. For two days the train chugged down the West Coast, through Washington State, Oregon and half of California. The window shades were drawn so that the dangerous cargo within, the men and women and children, could not see out.

At last, the train came to a halt on the California desert and they were transferred to the army trucks, which drove them to the camp. He hasn't forgotten his first sight of the compound, the barbed wire fence, the watchtowers and searchlights, and the soldiers with their machine guns. He hasn't forgotten the shadeless heat that rose to 115 degrees, the flies, the sandstorms, the crowded mess halls, the pit toilets that smelled of — well, I guess you can use your imagination.

He got his family settled, his parents and his five brothers and sisters, in the tiny room that was to be their home. Then he settled down on one of the eight cots, that were the room's only furnishings, and wondered what the future held for him. Why was he in this camp, locked up behind barbed wire like a criminal? He was an American citizen, born in Seattle. His only crime was that he had Japanese ancestors and the United States was at war with Japan.

General John DeWitt of the West Coast command, said the Japanese Americans were a "dangerous element." President Roosevelt signed Executive Order 9066, that allowed for their removal from the West Coast states. But how could his gentle, industrious parents be a dangerous element? What evidence did the government have against them?

The government had no evidence against them. The records do not reveal one act of sabotage by the "dangerous" Japanese Americans before, during, or after the war. Nevertheless, he was in three of the camps for two and half years until he was able to go to Detroit to take a job. His parents and youngest sister and brother were in camp for over three years, until he and his oldest brother could bring them to Detroit.

When they left their farm they stored those possessions they could not carry by hand in a shed near their house. One night vandals broke into the shed and destroyed everything they could carry away. The family's losses during the course of their "relocation" was everything they could not carry by hand.

They arrived in Detroit with little but the clothes on their backs. I met him there nearly 10 years after his "evacuation" when I was 24. We were married and started still another beginning, together.

He says he is not bitter about his incarceration. But, I am bitter that such an outrage could be committed by our national government against an innocent people. I'm bitter at the desecration of our Bill of Rights in this free and equal land. And, I'm bitter because this crime was kept out of our history books and away from the ears of our people.

Years after our marriage, I did extensive research on this deplorable subject and I was shocked and upset at what I found because my husband had told me little of his experiences during those dark days of the war. I was almost as shocked and upset as my husband was when first he saw the barbed wire and soldiers with their machine guns. I wanted to tell people about it but they did not want to listen. "It happened a long time ago," they said. "It doesn't concern us now." "Forget about it," they added, forgetting that history can repeat itself if we don't learn from it.

I'm glad that the Asian youth at the University of Michigan does not want to forget. They brought "Executive Order 9066," a collection of pictures of the evacuation and camps, to the university. I went to see the display at the University Union. I thought I was prepared for it. I had already seen the pictures but I wasn't prepared for the shock of seeing the images blown up to poster size.

As I stood looking at a photograph of one of the camps where my husband had been interned I saw that the man standing next to me was weeping. But, I have already wept and I have no tears left. I have only a huge ache in my heart for the victims of Executive Order 9066 and for the American dream our government betrayed.

When I left the room with the big pictures of Manzanar and Tule Lake and Pinedale and the other camps, I said a prayer that the American people would never forget them or forget the fragility of our freedoms.

Youth jobs are available in local area

Young people, 18-24 years of age, can receive job training which may lead to full-time employment through the Growth Works On-the-Job Training Program (OJT). The program is funded by a Michigan Department of Labor grant and will begin April 2 in this area.

OJT enables an individual to learn specific skills and qualify for an occupation through working in a supervised environment. Many local businesses have agreed to take participants for the OJT in areas such as manufacturing, clerical work, retail sales and computer service. Employers are subsidized by the state of Michigan for participants salaries.

Participants in the program will work 30 hours a week at a starting salary of $3 an hour. After one to four weeks of paid pre-employment training, each participant will be placed with an employer for the OJT phase. This phase may last up to three months. Employers are strongly encouraged to hire their trainee on a permanent basis after the OJT period.

To qualify for the program, applicants must be out of work and living on their own. They must also meet Michigan Employment Program (MEP) income guidelines.

There are 42 openings available in the program. Anyone interested in the MEP should call Growth Works, 455-4095, or drop by the center at 271 S. Main, Plymouth.

For further information, contact Dale Yagiela at 455-4095.

Eager Beavers treat mayor

The Romulus Eager Beavers (above) played host to Mayor William M. Oakley and other city officials last week for a luncheon prepared by its members. The organization, which consists of mentally retarded and developmentally disabled citizens 26 years and older, meets daily at their activity center located at the old Harrison School site, 14701 Harrison Rd., in Romulus. According to Mrs. Geneva Clark, supervisor of the program, the center offers a wide variety of activities and skills development classes, including food preparation, cookouts, field trips, rap sessions and other socialization exercises, arts and crafts classes, and education classes. On Friday, April 20, 1979, the Eager Beavers will host a special Olympics at the center, for mentally handicapped residents from Romulus and the surrounding communities of Taylor, Belleville, and Sumpter and Van Buren townships. For further information, call 941-6330. (Photo by Jay Young.)

White quail born

The learning center at Mt. Pleasant Elementary School in Romulus is now the proud parent of 11 Japanese quails. They have been named alphabetically after various staff members: Algertha, Alice, Audrey, Barbara, Celia, Charlotte, Delores, Elizabeth, Gail, Gene, and Jessie.

The quails were born the week of March 22 after spending 18 days in an incubator. The incubator was on loan from the Wayne County 4-H, and 24 eggs were purchased from them by the Mt. Pleasant P.T.O.

One of the 11 quails that hatched happens to be a very rare one. Most quails are shades of brown, but this one is an albino.

The quails will be old enough by April 23 to be sent home to children who are students of the learning center program. These children, as well as the entire student body of Mt. Pleasant, have all taken a deep interest in the project. Twenty-one children observed the quail hatching.

Plotting strategy

Members of the Galloping Ghosts team of the Wayne County Board of commissioners sought a sneaky way of overcoming a 30-point deficit commanded by Commissioner Clarence Young's team during the "Big Shoot-Out" game at Wayne State University April 7. Funds collected during the round robin tournament went to the county's Day at Jackson project to deter juvenile

Commissioners' benefit basketball game raises $500

About $500 and "$1-million worth of fun and goodwill" was earned during the first annual Wayne County Board of Commissioners Charity Basketball Tournament, according to its founder, Commissioner Delores Bennett.

The tournament was organized to generate cross-community goodwill and to benefit the Day at Jackson project, a prison-visit scare program to deter juvenile offenders from adult lives of crime.

Winner of the event was Woods Cleaners, a team from the Detroit Department of Parks and Recreation league, which represented Commissioner Clarence R. Young of Ecorse. They won easily over a team of commissioners and their family or celebrity representatives at the Wayne State University Matthaei Building April 7.

"The score was unimportant," Mrs. Bennett said. "We even tampered with the scoreboard and bribed the referees."

"What really matters is that we had a ball, and that we are going to have even more fun and raise more money next year. The older we get, the better we'll get."

Game participants included Father Vaughn Quinn from the Sacred Heart Rehabilitation Center, playing for George F. Killeen; former Detroit Piston Archie Clark, representing Clarence Young; Douglas Blair, representing U.S. Senator Carl Levin; and State Reps. Joe Young Jr. and George Cushingberry Jr.

Also playing were Commissioners James Rashid from Dearborn; R. William Joyner from Plymouth; and Paul G. Citkowski, Detroit. Still in their 20s, the three are the youngest members of the board.

Four other commissioners were represented on court by their sons. These include Ronald Beard, playing for Kay L. Beard of Inkster; Alfred Currie for Jackie L. Currie of Detroit; Ward Presnell for Thomas Presnell of Westland; and David Bykowski for Clemens E. Bykowski, Detroit.

Also present for what Mrs. Bennett called "fun and games day" were State Sen. David S. Holmes Jr.; Leon Atchison, director of Detroit Parks and Recreation; Del Russel, director of security for the Borman's supermarket chain and former director of the Detroit Police Athletic League; along with several other commissioners.

Commissioner Martha G. Scott was mistress of ceremony, and humorous play-by-play comment was provided by County Personnel Director John Barr and Commissioner Ervin A. Steiner Jr. of Grosse Pointe.

The tournament began with 15 teams representing individual commissioners in district competition over five weeks.

In the Detroit Parks and Recreation League, the winning Woods Cleaners were Class B champions in 1976, Class A champions in 1977, and Class A runner-up in 1978. Several are former college stars and one played professional football with the Chicago Bears.

MUSICAL NOTES

by Doug Brown

Some of the earliest mechanical music producers were in the form of automatic pianos. A combination of the popularity of mechanical music makers and an enthusiasm for pianos brought two together in the 19th and early 20th centuries. The first mechanical music for piano was called a "piano player" and was attached to an ordinary piano. Later, as the devices became more sophisticated, fully automatic player pianos and reproducing pianos became popular in homes and in bars.

For the most sophisticated pianos and organs to suit your needs today and for a long time to come DOUG BROWN MUSIC, 9219 S. Wayne Rd., Romulus, 941-8484 is the dealer to see. Things that matter

By GEORGE PLAGENZ
United Feature Syndicate

Let's say you are a Bible-believing Christian. Your next-door neighbor is Jewish. You are concerned that, because he does not "accept Jesus Christ as Lord and Savior," he will go to hell.

Should you try to convert him before it is too late?

The Lutheran Church-Missouri Synod thinks you should. The synod has embarked on a two-year program of evangelism among the Jews.

The reaction in the Jewish community has been mostly negative. Jewish leaders fear that such efforts are a threat to the existence of Judaism and a "call to Jews to betray their faith and heritage."

The Lutheran evangelistic campaign to convert the Jews also is expected to touch off sparks among liberal church leaders, who, according to Lutheran Witness magazine, "apparently believe that Jews can be saved without Jesus."

Christian evangelism among Jews has always been a touchy area. Only somewhat less touchy is the matter of evangelism among non-churchgoers in the Christian community. Not all Christians are in favor of trying to church the unchurched.

"My pastor told us to witness to people in our neighborhood who didn't go to church. So I did. Never again," says one church member who was "burned" for her efforts. What happened?

"I nearly lost my best friend, that's what happened," says the woman angrily. "I broached the subject of church with her on two or three occasions."

"Finally she told me, 'Martha, I like you, but if you bring up this business of being saved once more, I'm going to ask you never to come back in this house again.'"

Broadly speaking, evangelism refers to the churches' attempts to get new members or to deepen their members' Christian commitment.

There is considerable doubt in the minds of many, however, that evangelism really works. Some go further. They contend that the traditional evangelistic approach actually has alienated people from Christianity.

One of the most extensive evangelism programs ever launched was the "Here's Life, America" campaign sponsored by Campus Crusade for Christ. Bumper stickers and billboards featured the slogan, "I Found It!" (that is, a new life in Christ).

One survey following the crusade showed that of 26,000 people who attended the rallies in six cities, only 125 joined a church as a result.

"In most cases, the people who have joined our church," says one parish pastor, "first gave evidence of some interest, and we followed up on that. I think very few join a church these days as a result of those community canvasses to locate the unchurched."

A new Lutheran-Catholic study entitled, "Who Are the Unchurched?" by Dr. J. Russell Hale, a professor at Lutheran Theological Seminary in Gettysburg, Penna., reports that 80 million Americans — about 40 percent of the population — are unchurched.

The largest group, the study revealed, stay away from churches because they consider them filled with "hypocrites, phonies, fakers and persons living double lives."

Whether or not this is the "real reason" these people don't go to church, some church observers are ready to acknowledge that people may be turned away from church because they are not impressed with the quality of the lives of the people who do go.

"They find," says one critic, "that the people who attend church are no different from the people who don't go — they aren't more loving, more honest, don't have a happier family life, etc."

"So they figure, if it doesn't do anything for them, why should I bother to go?"

In his study of the unchurched Hale says, "There is abundant evidence that the behavior of Christians needs to undergo radical change if their witness is to be believable and effective. Change will need to occur in both personal and social relationships."

While most church evangelism programs are "goals," develop "strategies" and equip their workers with "tools," many ministers feel that "being Christ-like is the best way to attract people to Christ."

The Amigos

Musical group to perform at Bethany C.M.E. Church

One of the most outstanding groups in not only the ministry of music, but in ministering the Word, The Amigos, will be performing at 7 p.m. Monday and Tuesday at Bethany C.M.E. Church, 35737 Vinewood, Romulus.

The group includes Paul Ryan, drummer, Larry Velasquez, bass player and singer, Eli "Chico" Velasquez, lead guitar and singer, David Velasquez, rhythm guitar and singer, Judy Romero, keyboard and singer, and Mike Velasquez, lead guitar.

A church spokesperson said the group's "testimonials will bless you. They'll make you laugh; they'll make you cry. Their music will make you clap your hands and worship God."

The Amigos traveled with Charles and Frances Hunter full-time for two years and still perform with them several times a month.

The Amigos conduct church services and concerts, as well as 3-day seminars.

The Amigos performances at Bethany Baptist Church are part of a 30-day seminar, which will conclude April 26. Currently speaking at the church is Don Beard of Restoration Ministries.

Pastor John Corn has extended an invitation to the public to attend the concerts and revival.

SC sports display highlights safety

Everyone who is interested in interscholastic football — every coach, athletic director, parent and player — should give thoughtful consideration to the new "Safety in Sports" exhibit at the Detroit Science Center, 5020 John R. Street, in Detroit's Cultural Center.

That is the advice of Walt Baxley, boss of the biggest high school league in Michigan and the largest privately sponsored prep sports network in the United States, the Detroit

Archdiocesan Catholic League with an enrollment of 44 schools. (Cont. on Page A-10)

Ice storm damage may be deductible

The recent destructive ice storm of April 8 has damaged many landscape trees and shrubs. Homeowners and property owners preparing their federal income tax returns are reminded that the expense of removing, repairing and replacing damaged trees, shrubs and evergreens may be deductible from taxable income.

According to R. E. Abbott, Vice-President of the Davey Tree Expert Company, damage to landscape trees and shrubs by storms may be covered by homeowner's insurance or qualify as a casualty loss that is deductible from your income.

A qualified arborist or horticulturist should be consulted to determine which, if any, trees or shrubs are repairable. Proper pruning, fertilization, bark tracing and shaping the remaining tree branches are among the operations which help a tree overcome storm damage.

Invoices for these services should specifically identify the work as being storm damage or emergency work. A property owner can deduct the cost of removing destroyed plants, pruning the remaining plants to preserve them, and any replanting necessary to restore the property to its approximate value before the storm damage occurred. If tree and shrub loss is substantial and property value adversely affected, a qualified professional appraisal should be performed. In certain instances, trees and shrubs make a greater contribution to property value than the cost of removing, repairing or replanting them because of an ice storm. This usually is the case with medium to large trees which cannot be replaced with an equivalent.

The formula to determine loss in value of landscape trees, specimen shrubs and evergreens was developed by the International Society of Arboriculture, American Society of Consulting Arborists, American Society of Appraisers, National Arborists Association, American Association of Nurserymen, and Associated Landscape Contractors of America.

"The IRS requires that casualty losses be established by competent appraisal and photographs of the damage should be obtained immediately following the occurrence to substantiate the claim," Abbott said.

Davey Tree offers another tip. Be sure that the workmen and equipment servicing your property are covered by public liability, property damage and workers' compensation insurance. If tree care people working on the grounds are not properly covered by insurance, the homeowners could be liable in the event of accident. Ask to see an insurance policy or a letter specifying coverage before permitting work to begin.

Bottle law vs. litter control panel

Which is cost effective?

Is the Michigan Beverage Container Law worth the hassle? Is it cost effective? Are there other, less expensive ways to clean up the roadsides?

Opponents and proponents of the "bottle bill" voice strong opinions about both the disadvantages and the merits of the law.

Even though there will be a substantial reduction in roadside litter, some people believe the bottle bill is not cost effective. The bill will cost consumers far more dollars than a more intense litter control program, according to Maury Young, president of the Associated Food Dealers Association.

As a result of the bill, retailers will be handling an estimated four billion containers per year at an approximate cost of $180 million, Young said. On top of that, costs to bottlers and distributors have been estimated to average about $70 million, according to the Pepsi bottling company. According to Young, a considerable share of the total cost of $250 million will be passed on to the consumer. He says, in effect, that $250 million is being spent to do a $10-million job.

"It would be far more cost effective to increase the Litter Control Commission's budget," he maintains. "Litter Control's budget is currently about $1.3 million. If their budget was increased to $10 million, they could do a great job of cleaning up litter and consumers would save about $240 million."

Most Michigan retailers are cooperating with the provisions of the law. If they don't comply, they are subject to fines, points out

Edwin Bladen of the Michigan attorney general's office.

A task force organized by the state attorney general has issued a list of enforcement guidelines for the industry to follow.

"A retailer must refund deposits on containers — in cash — for brands, kinds and sizes he sells," Bladen said. "As long as the brand can be identified, a retailer must also accept containers even if they are dented or crushed flat. Retailers do not have to take back filthy containers, but beverage residue must be accepted."

How is the law affecting the brewing industry? According to Dave Erlandson of the U.S. Brewers Association, the law is expected to contribute to a reduction of available jobs in the industry and to increase the cost of beverages.

"As a result of the law, we've had to install new equipment and deal with labor problems," Erlandson said. "Our wholesalers have experienced a 30 percent loss of delivery efficiency, and retailers have had to re-adjust their product mix because of limited shelf and storage space available in their stores. The result has been a 30 percent reduction in shelf space for beverages in cans."

In a survey of 218 grocery stores, 43.6 percent of the stores showed a decrease in sales of both beer and soft drinks, Erlandson reported.

"The average decrease in sales reported for beverages in glass containers was 20 percent. The decrease in sales on beverages in cans was worse. And sales to wholesalers also are down — by 10 to 20 percent," he says.

Retail beverage sales are down even further than that in areas of Michigan near the Ohio and Indiana borders. People are crossing the borders to buy beverages because they are less expensive outside Michigan, Erlandson explained.

As it now stands, the law does not require containers which are subject to deposit to be reusable or recyclable. Critics of the law argue that if cans and bottles are not recycled, there may be little or no savings of energy or natural resources.

Peter Kakala, Michigan State University resource development specialist, says refilling glass containers instead of throwing them away and recycling aluminum cans conserve a great deal of energy and resources. He says most beverage manufacturers are refilling glass bottles and recycling aluminum cans. However, the fact remains that shipping empty containers back to a recycling point is expensive and could increase beverage prices.

All manufacturers may not be reusing containers. So, should there be an amendment to the bill to require that beverage containers must be reused or recycled? Kakala says there would be a great deal of opposition to an amendment of this type, and its chances of receiving the necessary 34 vote in the legislature would be slim.

Michigan Rep. Lynn Jondahl says that an incentive to conserve energy and natural resources already is built into the bill.

"The law was designed to provide an economic consumer incentive," he said. "Certified bottles are refillable and require a lower deposit than cans."

Has this economic incentive to buy bottles worked? According to Dave Erlandson of the U.S. Brewers Association: "Cans used to be the most popular beverage package. Now, about 60 percent of the beverages sold are in bottles and only 40 percent are in cans. However, in July when the camping season is going strong, sales on cans may increase again."

Ford asks Kahn to back residential postage proposal

Congressman William D. Ford (D-13th District) has called on President Carter's chief inflation fighter, Alfred Kahn, to support the congressman's bill to provide lower postal rates for individuals.

In a letter to Kahn, Ford emphasized the inflation-fighting concept behind his bill, the Citizens' Postal Rate Relief Act of 1979. "My bill would reduce the cost to the public of a federal service, without requiring any subsidy," Congressman Ford wrote. "In your role as the President's chief inflation fighter, I thought this legislation would be of special interest to you since it would result in lower postal rates for the public with no extra cost to the taxpayers."

Introduced by Congressman Ford on March 14, the "Citizens' Rate Bill" would establish a separate first-class category, with a deferred delivery priority, which private citizens could use at a rate as low as 11 cents. Business firms and other large mailers still would pay regular first class rates to ensure high priority for handling and delivery.

Urging Kahn's "full support and endorsement" of the legislation, Congressman Ford concluded: "I feel certain it will meet with the President's approval as one way in which rising costs can be held in check."

Ford also has joined a group of colleagues in sponsoring legislation to block President Carter's plan to end controls on domestic oil prices.

"Our legislation would continue domestic price controls through the end of September 1981," Congressman Ford said.

President Carter, using discretionary authority granted by Congress four years ago, has announced that he will phase out price controls on domestic

'Flyer' blasts Westland mayor's rescue proposal

By MAUREEN CAMPS
ANP Staff Writer

A picture of a skull and crossbones and the warning that "Your life is in DANGER" is the heading on an unsigned flyer that was distributed door-to-door to some 500 Westlanders this week as a protest to the mayor's proposed changes in the emergency rescue service now offered by the Fire Department.

Mayor Thomas Taylor said he saw and talked to a Westland fire fighter distributing the flyer, and the man has acknowledged he did produce and pass out the sheets on his own initiative. The Westland Fire Fighters Union has denied any authorization of the handout.

But it is no secret that the union and city still are wrestling with negotiations on a contract that expired 10 months ago, and that emergency service is a still unresolved issue.

When the mayor produced his proposed budget last week, a budget that eliminates 52 positions in the city, he said he wanted to take a hard look at the emergency rescue service provided by the Fire Department. At the very least, he wants to eliminate the rescue rig at one of the four stations, and charge residents $50 per run for what is now a free service.

At the most, he is considering proposing the city hire an ambulance service to transport injured or ill persons to the hospital. Rescue vehicles and fire fighters still would respond to calls, but would merely "stabilize" the victim and wait for the ambulance. He maintains that the procedure would save money while still providing the service to citizens.

The fire fighters union has made no official public response to the proposal.

But Monday night, the mimeographed flyer was left at the doorsteps of some 260 senior citizens living in apartments in the city's Greenwood Villa high rise. Tuesday, the flyer made an appearance on doors of homes in the city.

Taylor said the one fire fighter he found distributing them told him that he was doing so with permission of the union executive board.

But union representatives flatly deny any involvement in, or knowledge of the leaflets before they were told about them Tuesday morning when they called the city attorney to set up a negotiating session.

The young fire fighter who is the author of the flyer yesterday said he did not have authorization or help from the union in his one-man endeavor. He and his father were the ones passing out the sheets.

"I put the union in a tough spot, and I didn't mean to," he said. "I'm at the bottom of the totem pole (seniority list) in the fire department, the first one who'll be laid off. But it's not only that. I've had some experience with private ambulance people, and they can't do the job we do."

"I thought the public would be interested in what is happening."

The flyer tells the reader that "Your Mayor Tom Taylor is about to make a move that could cost your life." It lists the points against the use of ambulances and in favor of continuation of rescue service as it is now.

The note ends: "If you care — tell the mayor," then lists his city and home phone numbers.

Taylor's suggestion is that the council consider a system similar to that used in some other cities. The rescue team from the Fire Department would go to the scene of an emergency, "stabilize the victim," then let the private ambulance actually transport the person to the hospital.

Taylor said repeatedly in his budget message that there will be no "sacred cows" in city services, and he will look to outside contractors to perform what are now city services, if it seems it can be done cheaper and more efficiently.

Taylor added that he has contacted ambulance services, and one said it would locate two of its ambulances and personnel right in Westland (at space provided by the city) and offer the service, at no cost to the city. The victim would be billed for the transportation. Taylor said that cost would be about $60 to $65. The flyer claimed the cost would be between $65 and $100.

One reason for the mayor's desire to look at changing the set-up as it is now, is a new state law that requires that any personnel transporting injured persons have Emergency Medical Technician (EMT) training. That would require fire fighters get extra training, and the money issue looms. Who would pay for the training, should the man get overtime pay to attend classes off duty, and what should the wage scale of the EMT be?

Also at the bottom of the controversy is the fire fighter's contract clause that requires "minimum manning." A certain number of fire fighters must be maintained on duty at all times, even if it means calling in people on overtime. If the city reduces the job of rescue crews, that may mean it would want to reduce the number of men to below that minimum.

To do so, the city would have to get that minimum manning clause out of the contract. It is an issue considered vital by both sides, and apparently both the city and fire fighters are willing to take it all the way to arbitration to settle, if necessary.

The whole issue of the flyer "went public" Tuesday at a luncheon meeting of the Chamber of Commerce, where the mayor was scheduled to give his annual State of the City address.

He incorporated the flyer into his speech about how governments and government workers have traditionally resisted change.

After the mayor's remarks, the union's attorney, Pete Borgelt, who was at the meeting with two fire fighter union officers, was allowed a "rebuttal."

"This piece of literature did not come from, nor was it authorized by, the Westland Fire Fighters Association," he said. "We are in negotiations, and part of those negotiations revolves around EMT, it's been on the table for some time and it's no secret."

"It's also no secret that the city has been exploring the ambulance service."

"If, somewhere down the road the city and union bang heads (on the issue), we may very well go door to door. But you'll see our name on one piece of literature, and you'll see a union bug (label) on it, and the mayor will know we're doing it," he added.

The union is opposed to the use of ambulance service, and for basically the reasons listed in the flyer. They maintain that the private ambulances will take too long to arrive at the scene of an emergency, whereas fire rescue vehicles are there in 3 to 7 minutes to transport victims.

The flyer noted as one of its points that "the Fire Department rescue team will risk their lives to save yours. Can a private ambulance service say the same?"

Union representatives said the literature that was distributed will be "counterproductive" to negotiations, that are going on.

But union people also pointed out that the First Amendment guarantees anyone, fire fighter or otherwise, the right to his freedom of speech. Taylor agreed that apparently no law was broken.

It is apparent that even though the flyer appears to have been a one-man project, many fire fighters do agree with the points made on the typed sheet.

One fire fighter noted that in the mayor's proposed budget, each city department's functions are prioritized by need.

The animal control (dog catcher) function is labelled as "mandatory." Fire fighting and emergency rescue division is labelled as a "high" priority, a step below mandatory.

Y, Schoolcraft set Homemakers Day

Schoolcraft College's Community Services, in cooperation with the YWCA of Western Wayne County, will be sponsoring a Displaced Homemakers Day Sunday from 9:30 a.m. to 4 p.m.

The all-day conference will be held in the Liberal Arts Building on the Schoolcraft campus, 18600 Haggerty Road, Livonia.

The term "displace homemaker" refers to a woman who is widowed, divorced or has a disabled husband and has an immediate need for a job. Because she has spent many years as a homemaker, she is neither trained nor experienced in the job market. She now must adjust to a new role.

Ruth Fossedal, director of the Women's Development Center at Waukesha, County Technical Institute, Pewaukee, Wis., will begin the day with a keynote address, "Displaced Homemakers: Options and Opportunities."

Mrs. Fossedal frequently speaks and writes about women in the work force and will include information about nontraditional careers for women in her remarks.

The day will proceed with a panel of employers relaying vital information about various job opportunities for women. Panel members will discuss the fields of employment; marketing, clerical and word processing; health; life insurance; banking; and temporary jobs.

A choice of two out of three workshops will be available for all participants. Valerie Mayer-Simmons will conduct one workshop on skill assessment assisting women in identifying what job skills they possess and have developed in their lines. She also will discuss anxiety and problems women experience when involved in the job search.

Karen Zelin of the Feminist Credit Union and attorney Jean Wager will facilitate a workshop on financial and legal matters and the displaced homemaker.

A bag lunch should be brought. The registration fee for the day is $5. For registration and further information, call 591-6400, ext. 430.

Senior citizens club 'kitty' aids neighbors

Helping others

Giving is better than not giving, says Bette Potts, resident of Royal Holiday Estates Mobile Home Park in Canton Township. Mrs. Potts, along with members of the senior citizens association in the park, have been tossing their spare coins into a decorated coffee can to give

A senior citizen may be going without food on Tuesday to pay Friday's rent bill. That senior may be your neighbor.

That's what senior citizens from Royal Holiday Estates Mobile Home Park in Canton Township have learned in their recent campaign to help the "unnoticed needy senior."

"We've been reading so much lately about seniors who need help and can't get it. Many just don't reach out and you've got to go to them," said Bette Potts, president of the Royal Holiday Seniors Club.

"And so we're helping them," said Mrs. Potts.

Active members of the park club have been throwing their spare change into a specially decorated coffee can at the clubhouse, and when the can fills up each week Park Manager Doris Ramage takes it to the grocery store to purchase as much food as the money will buy.

Then Mrs. Ramage delivers the groceries to seniors in need residing within the seniors mobile home park, located on Warren Road in Canton's northern section.

"No one knows who the money is spent on except Mrs. Ramage," Mrs. Potts said, "And that's the way it will remain. Because we don't care who they are as long as people are being helped."

The concept was suggested at a regular board meeting nearly a month ago, but received frowns of disapproval from seniors who felt those in need may be too proud to accept charity.

After long debate, it was decided if the recipient's identities were to remain confidential that contributions would be well received.

"Well it's worked. You see individually we couldn't do anything. But together we feel we're really helping people, and these are people who live in our very own park," said Mrs. Potts.

The philanthropic group had contemplated donating their spare change to already established charity organizations or to govern those charities spend more money ment administered seniors programs.

That idea was quickly dismissed. "I hate to say this but some of on fancy luncheons and different things that we just couldn't in good conscience send our money there. And with government programs, well you know, of every dollar spent 20 cents actually goes to the seniors. No we wanted to do it ourselves so we knew for sure where the money is going." Mrs. Potts said taking obvious pride in the fact that zero dollars in their in-home charity campaign have been budgeted for administration costs.

The group will purchase prescriptions for seniors in need, and by Christmas a special fund will be established to provide them with holiday gifts.

Part of the campaign includes a penalty provision stating that if a senior forgets to wear his or her identification badge to a board meeting or special gathering they will be fined 10 cents, with the dime being tossed, of course, into the coffee can.

"Some of us have bad memories. For once it pays off..." grinned Mrs. Potts.

19 file petitions Board race draws a crowd

A field of 19 candidates have filed petitions to run for three vacant seats on the Wayne-Westland Board of Education.

The turnout of interested citizens is the largest number of candidates to seek office in some time. In recent years, interest seemed to wane in seeking the office.

This is apparently the right time for political hopefuls to run, however, since none of the three board members now sitting in those seats up for grabs were elected to the job.

All three — Donald Rusnock, Mildred Batterson and Kenneth Marshall — were appointed within the past year to fill vacancies on the board. So, there are no long-time elected incumbents to be toppled by the challengers.

There are two separate races. The first is the usual school election to fill two terms expiring in June. Although former board members Agnes Greene and Robert Reichard both resigned, their terms would have expired in June anyway. Eleven people have filed petitions to be on the ballot in that race, where the top two vote getters will get the two 4-year terms.

The second contest, which will be placed separately on the ballot, will list the candidates who wish to serve the one year remaining in the unexpired term of Vincent J. Petitpre. The top vote getter wins the one-year term that will expire in June 1980. A total of 10 people filed petitions to run in that race.

Two candidates filed petitions to run in both races. They will have to withdraw from one race or the other by 4 p.m. April 12. That is the deadline for any candidate wishing to withdraw his name from contention.

In such a case where there are separate contests for elected seats on the ballot, it is common for some candidates to file in both races, size up the competition in each race, then withdraw from one of the elections.

Donald Rusnock, 1487 Selma, Westland, and William J. Liedel, 38651 Meadowlawn, Wayne, have filed petitions in both contests.

Other candidates seeking election to the 4-year term are James E. Gillespie, 1261 Sutton, Westland; Anne S. Harbison, 865 Carlson, Westland; Kenneth E. Marshall, 34930 Elm, Wayne; Daryl A. Perkins, 736 Fairlane, Westland; Charles W. Pickering Jr., 1026 Dowling, Westland; Kathryn Shaw, 514 N. Hanlon, Westland; Brian T. Sullivan, 41848 Woodbrook, Canton; Paul Tavana, 30900 Palmer, Westland; and Vincent J. Petitpre, 39125 Palmer, Westland.

Other candidates seeking election to the unexpired term are Mary E. Arbour, 685 Worchester, Westland; Mildred J. Batterson, 35252 Winslow, Wayne; Robert A. Eisminger, 36610 Gilchrist, Westland; Michael Mason, 34317 Florence, Westland; Sandra A. Warren, 32525 Oriole, Wayne; Joseph D. Chin Jr., 158 S. Marie, Westland; Harper H. Brock, 36154 Winslow, Wayne; Becky J. Hmoud, 36212 Schley, Westland.

The election is June 11. In the meantime, the voters of Wayne-Westland Schools will be asked to vote May 9 on a 3-mill tax proposal for school operation, a proposal that was narrowly defeated in March.

The College Scene

Two Belleville residents were among more than 1800 students recognized for their academic excellence at Ferris State College in Big Rapids.

Named to the Academic Honors List for the winter quarter were John K. Batzer of Clarence Street and Pamela S. Fitch of Second Street, both of Belleville.

To be named to the listing, the duo had to earn at least a 3.25 grade point average and carry a full academic schedule during the quarter.

Also on the college scene: Peter E. Preis of Shook Road, Romulus has been awarded his bachelor of science degree during the winter commencement ceremony for Wayne State University in Detroit.

The graduation exercise took place Dec. 12 at Cobo Hall in Detroit.

Recent appointments to staff at Eastern Michigan University in Ypsilanti included Patty D. Van Buren-Craig as postal clerk in the mailroom.

The appointment was approved by the university's Board of Regents March 21.

Four Belleville-Romulus residents are among 4,600 University of Michigan (Ann Arbor) students recognized at the April 6 Honors convocation.

An annual event, class honors went to Teri Jeffries of Garner, Romulus, Beverly Freysinger of Sunrise Lane, Belleville; Lauren Gerard Nowak of Willis Road, Belleville, and Kathleen Salutz of Edgedale Drive, Belleville.

Also in college news: Belleville resident John Landoski achieved placement on the winter quarter's Dean's List at Michigan Technological University in Houghton.

MAY I RECOMMEND A BOOK FOR YOU TO READ?

In this column we usually answer a question that represents a concern expressed to me. This we would like to recommend an excellent book by Dr. Elisabeth Kubler-Ross, Questions and Answers on Death and Dying.

This book presents many of the questions which have been asked of Dr. Kubler-Ross by people who have heard her lectures, attended her seminars or workshops on caring for the dying. The answers found in this book relate mostly to adults.

Death is still a subject all too often avoided in thought and discussion - not because we do not care, but because we feel so helpless and find too many unanswered questions about this final parting. This book can provide a thoughtful and constructive guide.

We have a collection of books on the subject of death-and-dying which might be helpful to you, especially if you have a close friend or relative who has died or is close to death. Please consult us whenever we can serve you.

State law requires waitresses, waiters receive minimum wage

Employers must guarantee that waiters and waitresses earn at least the minimum wage of $2.90, according to State Labor Director Pat Babcock.

Employers can only deduct a maximum of 25 percent from the minimum wage of waiter's or waitresses earnings for tips and room and board. But workers must be advised wages will be reduced because of these allowances.

An employer can not hire someone to wait tables for only tips but must guarantee the waiter or waitress at least the minimum wage. With the tip and room and board allowance the absolute minimum an employer can pay is $2.175 an hour.

The current minimum wage became effective Jan. 1, 1979.

A proprietor can not require a worker to turn in tips. However, tips may be pooled among service personnel having direct contact with customers. Employees are required to declare all their tips as income. Busspersons, hosts or hostesses can be in on tip pools. But kitchen personnel can't receive any portion of the tips.

A restaurant or hotel can deduct a fee for room and board, but the maximum amount that can be charged is limited and regulated by law.

Five cents per hour can be deducted, if the employee is furnished a meal including eggs, meat, fish or poultry, two vegetables, salad, beverage and bread and butter. For a light meal consisting of a sandwich, beverage and dessert, three cents an hour can be deducted. Three cents an hour also can be deducted for breakfast.

As far as lodging goes, 8 cents an hour for single worker occupancy and 4 cents an hour for multiple worker occupancy of the same room can be deducted from the worker's wages.

Employers can't charge whatever they feel like for room and board. No matter how much food is provided or how plush the lodging is, the maximum total deduction for all items including a tip allowance can not exceed 25 percent of the minimum wage.

A waiter or waitress also is entitled to overtime for any work in excess of 40 hours a work week. If the employee is earning $2.90 an hour, overtime is based on that rate — not $2.175. There is no tip allowance for overtime.

A restaurant employee can not be charged for dish breakage or be required to pay when a customer walks out without paying.

And employee may be asked to furnish his or her own uniform, if all that is required is a common outfit like a white uniform or black skirts or slacks.

If the uniform for the restaurant is specific, like a red checked shirt with a monogram, or a plaid jumper, then the employer is responsible for providing uniforms.

Employers can not charge workers for uniform rental or laundering.

Safety

The exhibit, glowing in maize and blue, showcases the protective headgear worn in fencing, football, baseball, hockey and motorcycling and shows the development of the modern football helmet specifically. It also depicts the central nervous system and points out the gravity of injuries to the head and neck.

The "hands-on" display is a powerful argument enjoining coaches and players alike to observe the rules against using the head as a battering ram.

"I don't see how anyone who has studied this exhibit could ever condone spiking, leading with the head in blocking and tackling and other dangerous practices," Bazylewicz said.

Features of the modern football helmet are the suspension systems which diffuse shocks, the back shield to guard against whiplash and the optional protective collar.

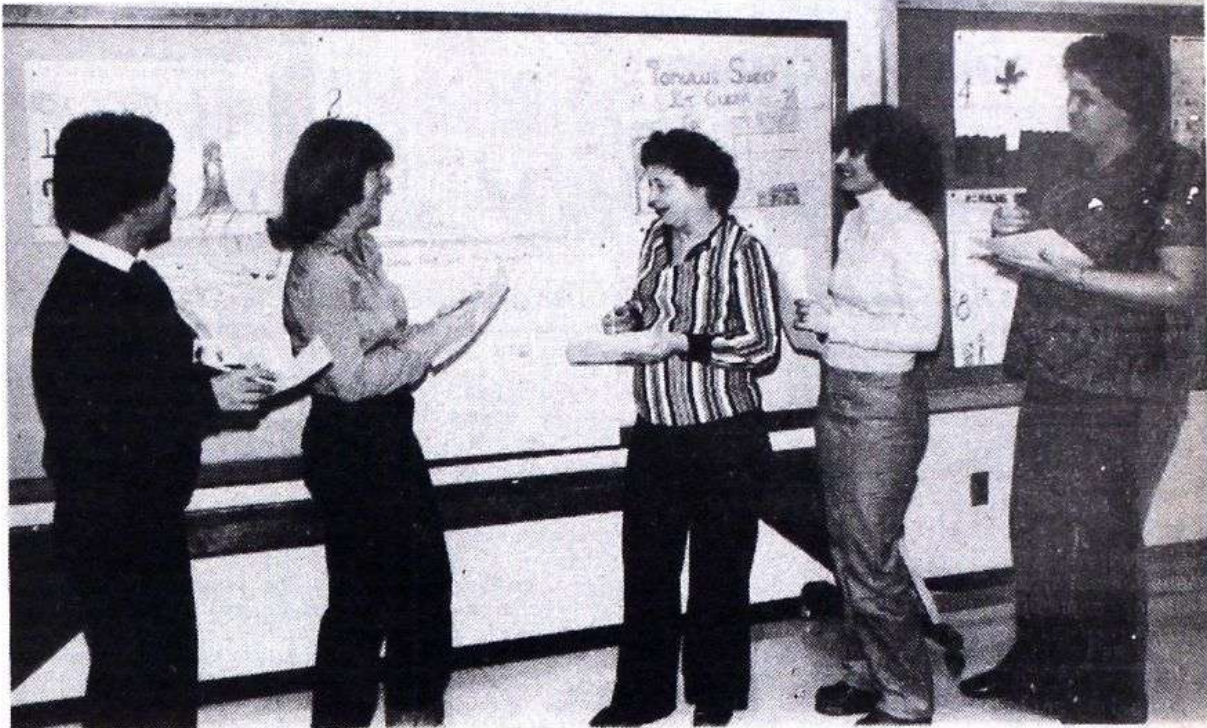

Bazylewicz pointed out: "Athletes are very vulnerable to injury, reactions slow down when they are exhausted. For that reason, players should observe sensible training regulations and work themselves carefully into peak physical condition before competing."

With these points in mind, whether amateur, sandlot, varsity or professional player, "Safety in Sports" has educational entertainment for everyone — only at the Detroit Science Center, open seven days and nights a week. Call 833-1892 for further information.

Hello Dolly! to open here

Dolly Levi, who will portray Jill Southward, poses in rehearsal with arms outstretched for forthcoming production of "Hello Dolly!" which will be presented May 10, 11, 12, 18 and 19 at Belleville High School by a cast of students. Beginning April 30, tickets may be purchased in the lobby of the high school auditorium from 2:30 to 4 p.m. and on May 7, 8 and 9 from 5 to 9 p.m. Senior citizen gold card owners may see the play at no cost. The first, second and third place winners will receive $25, $15 and $10 respectively. In addition, each finalist will receive prize ribbons and certificates of appreciation from the city. This year's winners are: first place, Mikal McCain, nine years old in the fourth grade at Beverly School; second, Jennifer Blaszcak, eight years old in the third grade at Cory School; and third place, Song-Ae LaCoste, 10 years old, in the sixth grade at Merriman School. VAN BUREN TOWNSHIP JOINT MEETING

JOINT MEETING-PLANNING COMMISSION-RECREATION COMMISSION-TOWNSHIP BOARD

April 10, 1979

46425 Tyler Rd. Belleville, Michigan 48111

Meeting called to order by Supervisor Cullin at 8:04.

Recreation Director Mark Rairick introduced the members of the Recreation Commission that were present: Chairman Marvin Wenzel, Donna Clark, Marilyn Bach, George Brown, Carl Marosi and Fred Domen. Dorothy York was the only representative present from the Planning Commission.

Township Board Members present: Supervisor Cullin, Clerk Craven, Treasurer York, Trustees Hall, Welty, Domen. Trustee Maton absent due to work schedule.

Supervisor Cullin turned the meeting over to Steve Ron of Parkins, Rogers for his presentation of 1979 Recreation Master Plan.

Steven Ron stated that the target date for completion of the plan is the year 2000 based on the estimated population increase to 51,900 people in Van Buren Township by that year.

A Neighborhood park concept was presented showing small (3 to 5 acre) parks located in 13 sections of the Township. Some of these parks would utilize facilities already available by contracting with the existing facilities to insure use by the public in the future.

This plan is a recommendation, actual implementation of the different phases would depend on the rate of development and population growth in the future.

Trustee Domen asked Mr. Ron on what basis the "Neighborhood Park Concept" was used in the development of this plan. It was Trustee Domen's recollection that this Board had in the past rejected this type of concept on the basis of economics involved in upkeep and maintenance. Grants are available to build Recreation Facilities but maintenance costs necessitates the use of General Funds.

Mr. Ron stated he was not aware of this past decision by board. Revisions, based on Board recommendations, can and will be made. These revisions will be presented at the Joint Meeting of the Recreation Commission, Planning Commission and Township Board at the Regular Meeting of the Recreation Commission on April 19, 1979 Thursday at 7:30 at the Township Hall.

Supervisor Cullin stated the Township was not against the Neighborhood Park Concept as such, the manpower and maintenance costs prohibited such a concept. If individual developers donated park areas and homeowner associations directed and maintained them, the Township had no objections to this arrangement.

Mark Rairick, Recreation Director, thanked Mr. Ron for his presentation and complimented him on the work he has done.

Landlords' aid sought to meet housing plan

BY MAUREEN CAMPS
ANP Staff Writer

The City of Westland is inviting landlords — particularly those in the Norwayne Subdivision, where rental units are numerous — to share in a housing rehabilitation project that would result in guaranteed rents to them from the federal government.

The city has set its goal at 100 units to be "substantially rehabilitated." Once that is done, the landlord would be guaranteed rents from the federal government, if they agree to rent to identified low- and moderate-income families.

The government would guarantee rents as high as $448 for a 3-bedroom duplex, if the landlord has substantially improved the house, if he maintains it in that top condition, and if he pays the utilities.

The landlord would, in effect, be a co-sponsor with the City of Westland in a project for rent assisted housing.

The program would serve the purpose of improving housing stock in Westland in general and providing adequate housing for low- and moderate-income families, the latter a high priority with the Department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD).

It also would serve to help the City of Westland fulfill its Housing Assistance Plan (HAP), which is the city's promise it gives to HUD each year to try and provide housing for low- and moderate-income families. Providing that housing is one of the "strings" attached to the approximately $1 million in Community Development (CD) funds the city receives each year.

One type of housing is the kind offered to senior citizens, in the high rises such as Westgate Tower, Greenwood Villa and the soon to be completed city-owned Central City Park Tower. But cities also must address housing needs of low- and moderate-income families.

If the landlords don't offer to cooperate on the rent assistance program with enough units to please HUD (100 is the goal), the city will then buy homes and rent them out to meet the goal in providing housing, said city administrators. That would in effect put the city in the position of being the landlord, as it already is for the elderly units at the Central City Park Towers. The city, through the Housing Commission, owns that building.

Elderly housing is one type of low income housing that HUD wants the cities to provide, and they gladly have done so. Family housing is the other, and the type that cities have traditionally shied away from providing.

But if the city can convince enough landlords to join as a project co-sponsor and pledge to join the program, the city will not have to get into the landlord business.

A group of Norwayne landlords were invited to meet with city officials Tuesday to listen to the proposal that they participate in the program, called "Section 8" by HUD.

Westland Mayor Thomas Taylor and his staff wanted to explain how they think the program can benefit the landlords themselves — by assuring them rents far above what they get now, as well as helping the city meet its goal.

The landlord would have to make an initial investment, by "substantially rehabilitating" the units, but would get the return on his investment by guaranteeing rents "forever."

Housing director Bob Fritz explained that substantial rehabilitation is defined as a rehabilitation that will increase the worth of the house by 25 percent of the amount it is worth on the market when renovations are done. Such renovations would include standard ones of bringing the house up to code with electrical, plumbing and like repairs, installation of insulation, storm windows or any energy saving materials, roof repair or rebuilding, aluminum siding and such.

The government has offered these 100 rent subsidies to Westland with virtually no competition for the funds, as long as the city has the 100 units lined up by May 18. That close deadline puts quite a bit of urgency on the city's development of the plan.

Fritz made sure to point out that with the promise of lucrative rents, also will come responsibilities on the part of landlords. In addition to the initial fix-up investment, which will have to be privately financed by the landlord through a bank, he must pay the utility costs, maintain the units and comply with HUD rental procedures in working with the city, (probably the housing commission) to insure that low-income families are the renters.

The renter would be obligated to pay a maximum of 25 percent of his income as rent, and the rest would come to the landlord from HUD.

A recently announced program allowing landlords to borrow federal money (through the city) at 3 percent interest rates to fix up homes, could not be used by landlords "substantially rehabilitating" their units for the rent subsidy program.

City officials also explained a separate rent subsidy program to landlords, in cases where the home already has been brought up to code and does not need that "substantial rehabilitation." In that case, rent subsidies also are available, but are much lower than the Section 8 proposal and separate from the 100-unit goal.

Landlords — about 30 people representing more than 225 units — appeared receptive to the program.

Mayor Taylor emphasized that he believed the program to be a very good thing for landlords, since the rents, which are substantially higher than collected now, are assured for as long as the landlord continues in the program.

Avenue paving resumes May 1

By JIM BRADLEY
ANP Staff Writer

Inkster officials have been told that the paving of Michigan Avenue should start about May 1.

But if they and merchants along the city's main thoroughfare are skeptical, you can't blame them one bit.

After all, how many target "dates" have been set (and missed) on this major paving project since it started one year ago?

The State Highway Department and its contractor John Carlo Company so irritated City of Inkster officials with paving delays last year that the city took the highway department to court.

Nothing much actually came out of the lawsuit except that Carlo was ordered to put up more lighted signs showing possible danger. Also, the excavated two lanes that ran the length of the highway in the city had the sharp edge of the concrete rounded off with asphalt in case a car drove off.

Meanwhile, a group of some 25 Michigan Avenue merchants have told The Ledger-Star they intend to sue the state for damages lost through delays on the project.

"I hope they do sue the state for damages. I think they have a very good case," Inkster Mayor Terrel LeCesne said when informed of the possible lawsuit by the businessmen.

"I'm very disappointed in the lack of progress on the project," he continued. "We had a meeting with State Highway Department officials on March 6 and were told they would resume work April 1."

LeCesne said that Elon Mickels, economic developer for Inkster, and John Bloodworth, acting director of public service, accompanied him to the meetings in Southfield.

"I expected that they should have been to work about five weeks now," LeCesne pointed out. "We were definitely told by State Highway officials that Carlo would resume work on April 1."

"We have had some rain, but I am still bitterly disappointed that nothing much has been accomplished. We have been used," said LeCesne. LeCesne became so irate at one point last fall that he wouldn't attend a meeting with State Highway officials for fear of what he might say or do.

And the other City Councilmen felt the same way, as did Wally Arrowsmith, who was serving as interim city manager at the time.

Now that much rain has fallen, LeCesne says he was told that April 11 was the new target date that Carlo Co. was to begin work preparatory to the actually pouring of cement. Still to be paved are four inside lanes, two on each side of the divided highway, that run from Henry Ruff Road on the west to Beech Daly Road on the east.

When the construction project is finished, Michigan Avenue will be a divided highway with four lanes going east and four headed west.

LeCesne was asked when he thought the paving would be completed.

"I'll believe it when I see it."

Canton trustees back membership in Nankin Transit

Canton Township officials unanimously agreed to support a move to merge with the Nankin Transit Commission's Dial-A-Ride mini-bus service Tuesday night.

Board member's resolution had a two-fold purpose.

'...I hope the service will improve...'

By becoming the fifth charter member of the commission Canton should receive free bus service, as well as having voting power on policy-decision making.

For nearly two years Canton has been a participating member to the bus service on a contractual basis. As a non-charter member community, Canton paid a $6 per ride fee, amounting to approximately $12,000 to $15,000 per year, with an additional 50¢ per ride charged to individuals using the service.

Their resolution was not a formal motion to accept the commission's tentative offer to permit the merge.

"We'll just say we're favorably inclined to merge," said Supervisor Noel Culbert.

Culbert is also concerned with the quality of bus service, and said he hopes seniors will see improvements from the Dial-A-Ride service once, and if, Canton becomes a charter member.

In recent months the Canton Eagle learned of many seniors dissatisfied with the bus service, some claiming to have been told to "walk it" when the service could provide only a partial ride to their destination.

Other shut-in seniors without meals were told to wait more than 48 hours for bus service, and then no guarantee...

Glen Shaw, director-chairman of the Nankin Transit Commission, said the commission must still take a formal vote on whether Canton should become a fifth member.

"But I see no reason why they (the Nankin Transit Board) won't be favorable," Shaw said.

He admitted to flaws in the system, and that with Canton a charter member it will have more say-so on service provided to its own community residents.

"I can only say I hope the service will improve," Shaw said, noting that with more than 300 riders per day it is difficult to accommodate all needs.

For the past year South Eastern Michigan Transportation Authority (SEMTA) the funding source for the bus service, was providing the commission with an approximate $300,000 budget.

But this year with budget nearly doubled, Shaw said Canton's 36 square mile community would not be too much of a geographical or financial burden.

For the first year into the program, Canton was serviced in its eastern half. The western rural section was not serviced.

Township officials took a poll of seniors' attitudes toward the service during recent weeks, after learning of Shaw's tentative offer.

The result, according to Delores Edwards seniors recreation coordinator, was that seniors in the northern section, (north of Ford Road), were pleased with the service rating it "excellent."

In the southern section the service was rated "poor." The further south seniors lived, the less favorable they were towards the bus service.

crude oil over a 29-month period, beginning June 1.

The result is expected to be a sharp rise in gasoline and fuel-oil prices over the next two years.

"This additional cost to consumers will simply drop into the profit baskets of the major oil companies, in the form of a windfall," Congressman Ford declared.

"Although President Carter has asked Congress to approve a 'windfall profits' tax on these additional profits, it is likely that the oil lobby and its supporters in the Congress will be able to block such legislation or delay it indefinitely."

"I strongly believe that decontrol should not be started until after a windfall profits tax is enacted," Congressman

Ford said. "Our legislation would give Congress and the Administration the time to work out an effective taxing plan. I do not want to see additional profits handed to the oil companies at the expense of the already overburdened consumer."

"The argument is being used that additional profits will encourage the oil companies to invest in exploration and development of new domestic oil sources. But I do not see this happening. Corporate profits already are increasing at a rapid rate, and the oil companies are using the extra money to invest in everything from department stores, banks and insurance companies, to real estate, cosmetics and overseas mineral production."

Editorial opinions

Implementing Headlee shows their colors

Last week in this space we commented on passage of House Bill 4232.
That legislation is part of a necessary new law for implementing provisions of the voter approved Headlee Tax Limitation proposal.
HB 4232 was the culmination of successful efforts by some of our elected officials to circumvent the will of the people who supported the concept of tax limitation for Michigan.
This week, the Michigan Senate is now discussing the passage of legislation which would address the same goal. But to the credit of the Senate, they have realized that the citizens of the state voted to adopt tax limitation based on reality, not the wishes of special interest groups such as the Michigan Education Association (MEA).
The Senate version of HB 4232 - SB 202 - has done much to correct the built in shortcomings of house passed legislation.
We urge the senate to stick-to-their-guns in the face of intense lobbying by the MEA to remove the heart from Headlee's proposal, which a majority of Michigan voters supported.

Private Property Week

Realtors across the nation are asking Americans to observe April 16-22 as Private Property Week in annual celebration of one of the most widely exercised rights — that of owning real property.
To appreciate how precious this freedom is, one has only to consider life in many other parts of the world. In some lands, ownership of any property remains the sole right of the state which determines where and how you may live. Over much of the globe even today, political or military struggles create a seemingly endless tide of displacement served only by refugee camps and makeshift quarters.
In the United States, by contrast, two-thirds of households are homeowners. The value of their 54 million single-family homes alone totals some $1.9 trillion — approximately one-fourth of the nation's wealth. About one third of these homes are owned free and clear with only about $470 million of the total value representing mortgage debt.
By choice or opportunity, nearly a fifth of all Americans will move this year with a high proportion selling homes on the open market and using accumulated equity to purchase another. A conservative estimate suggests that more than $250 billion will be invested for new and existing homes this year.
Such rights have never been seriously threatened since their establishment in the earliest days of our nation, so this special week should serve us all as a reminder of how fortunate we are.

The Van Buren five revisited

Van Buren Township. Is anybody there?
That is the question asked on the front page of the latest issue of the Michigan Township News.
That monthly publication, houseorgan of the Michigan Township Association (MTA), presented an editorial by MTA's Executive Director, Robert R. Robinson.
In his opinion, among other things, Robinson lamented the fact that big media generally condemned the actions of the Van Buren's officials who chose jail rather than surrender to the arbitrary will of Circuit Court.
Robinson further attempted to equate the circuit court action to logic and law, he failed. He failed because, as we and several other newspapers both large and small have indicated, little logic or law was apparently involved in the circuit court contempt citation issued against the Van Buren five.
We would assume from Robinson's late entry into the discussions surrounding the Van Buren situation, that it has taken until now for his organization to decide on its position in the matter of Van Buren's officials against judicial encroachment.
That is a shame.
But it is not unusual for organizations such as Robinson's to take the safe road rather than a potentially dangerous route that is right.
While we certainly welcome Robinson's arrival on the scene in defense of the Van Buren officials, we wish he had spoken out as vocally in December of '78 when his voice may have had more influence.
As for us, just one of the newspapers which supported the Van Buren officials from the first, we remain opposed to the judicial encroachment on the legislative functions of government.
After all, had our founding fathers wanted the judiciary to make legislative decisions, there would be only one branch of government, rather than three.

Part of the April issue of Inquiry magazine deals with the growing movement in the U.S. to resist federal income taxes.
In the article titled: Tax Revolt, Saying No to the IRS, author Frank Browning provides case histories of citizens who have taken on the tax collectors and have won.
But probably, more important than the fact that some out-gunned and out-numbered taxpayers have managed to avoid some or all of their tax obligations, is the fact, that most of those people interviewed for the story, felt that "the IRS is more interested in gagging opponents of the system than in collecting back taxes."
A rather remarkable charge, but one with some credibility given the history of the IRS's dealing with those they see as adversaries.
For most of us, the ordeal of filing our income tax forms results in a renewed sense of frustration and anger at a system, apparently designed to encourage welfare, unemployment and low productivity, and to discourage thrift, initiative and hard work.
But for some others, the April 15 filing deadline for federal tax returns, simply provides an opportunity to protest the system's faults.
But the IRS is not without recourse in dealing with those who chose to fight.
Several years ago, I was on a flight from Dallas to Detroit and had the occasion to sit next to an attractive young woman who impressed me with her grasp and general knowledge of current events.

During the conversation, I mentioned casually that I was working on a script for a film which would deal with the federal bureaucracy and those thousands of faceless people who were neither elected or appointed to represent us, but who nevertheless managed to make hundreds of decisions each week which directly affected my welfare.
The young lady, who shall remain nameless, commented that perhaps I should reconsider my involvement in the project lest the IRS take retaliatory measures to discourage that type of publicity, as she claimed she was subjected to.
While I certainly didn't know the young lady before boarding the plane, and in fact have never heard from her since, her comments contained the same implications I have heard from others both before and since my meeting with her.
Example: For 11 years, Mike Tecton of Oklahoma failed to file his yearly federal income tax return. For 11 years, the IRS ignored the situation until in 1974, Tacton took a small advertisement in a Washington newspaper.
His ad challenged the IRS to debate the morality of a mandated federal tax.
Four days after the ad ran, Tecton was tracked down by the IRS and prosecuted for his failure to file his yearly returns. While Tecton was found guilty, only a suspended sentence was imposed, but it is interesting that his failure to file was ignored only while he remained silent.

Example: Mr. Robert Tisch, Shiawassee County, Michigan, Drain Commissioner, and leader of the Tisch Coalition for Tax Cut in Michigan, had not had his federal tax returns audited for the past 17 years.
For 17 years Tisch went unaudited. Last year he led a movement to cut taxes and last week he was informed by the IRS that his federal returns were going to be audited.
Interesting coincidence!
And probably the best example of all was former president Nixon's use of the IRS to harass his political enemies, both real and imagined.
Perhaps, in large part, the growing nationwide Tax Revolt is the result of unfair application of existing law more than it is a condemnation of taxes and taxation itself.
But perhaps not.
Maybe it's time for the watchers to have watchers. Maybe we should ask the FBI to keep an eye on the IRS. Then the CIA could watch the FBI. And Ralph Nadar would be happy to watch the CIA. And because everyone knows that Nadar wants everyone to watch him, our problems would be eliminated, or at the very least, watched closely.
But then again, every chain has its weak link.

Michigan and the Federal Clean Air Act

By EDWARD E. MAHALAK
State Representative
38th District

A strict air quality control system will be phased in over the next several years in Michigan for both cars and industrial plants.
The air quality standards are not the result of action by the Michigan Legislature, but rather the Federal Clean Air Act.
However, the Michigan Legislature and State agencies will have to implement the federal law.
I will be involved as Chairman of the House Appropriations Subcommittee on Transportation, which recently received information on the air quality standards.
An initial step will be an appropriation for a study of air quality in five communities in Southeastern Michigan.
The Michigan Department of Transportation will deal with passenger vehicles and commercial vehicles, while the Department of Natural Resources will be involved with industrial and commercial facilities.
Under the federal mandate, we will have to come up with a demonstration maintenance program which will have to be in full operation by December, 1982.
Under the standards, vehicles which do not meet the standards will be denied licenses.
I think people should be aware of these new air quality standards, and what they will mean to us. Unless there are some changes by Congress, we will have them and we will have to live with them. The Michigan Legislature will attempt to implement the federal standards in the most reasonable possible way, but since they are not of our doing, there is not much we can do about them.

If the State did not implement the federal standards, it could mean the loss of federal aid funds for highways, water treatment plants, air quality controls and other state and community needs.
Studies by the Departments of Transportation and Natural Resources indicate that, at a minimum, the Detroit metropolitan area does not presently meet federal air quality standards, and will not do so by 1982. Because of this, the state has asked that the deadline be extended to 1987. It is possible that other urban areas in the State may not be able to meet the standards of 1982, although the best information developed to date indicates that they should be able to do so.
Michigan's motor vehicles may be in better shape in meeting the federal air quality standards, Mahalak noted.
Passenger cars in Michigan are not typical of those in most other states in that they are not as old and are replaced more frequently. This means that more vehicles with more efficient air pollution control equipment are on the highways in Michigan, thereby emitting less pollutants than in other states where the average age of a car is greater.

There is also good reason to believe that passenger vehicles in Michigan are maintained at a higher level than is the case in most other states, especially warm weather states, because our winter climate necessitates a yearly tune-up to guarantee reliable winter-time starting and running.
Unfortunately, while the federal Environmental Protection Agency may accept that Michigan's privately-owned passenger car fleet is unique in make-up, it will not accept that our maintenance level is different from the national level, and it will be hard for us to prove otherwise. This could be a serious problem for us.
Michigan presently has no data base on the type, frequency and cost of emission control equipment repairs, which is not only a major consumer issue but also an issue related to the overall economic impact of the federal air quality control program on the State.

Reader comments on Van Buren landfill

Editor:

Right or Wrong - Van Buren Township officials have made a great personal sacrifice to protect the pollution of waters in Van Buren Township.
The Citizens of Van Buren should always be grateful for their position even though I feel the Mobile Home Developer will prevail and the courts will force the granting of permits.

I guess we can learn to live with some pollution of the Lake and fortunately the pollution is diluted with the flow of water which can be self cleaning over a period of time. I am concerned, however, with a greater potential of pollution of unknown quantities which we can be exposed to by the Wayne Disposal Landfill.

While we can measure the Lake Pollution we have no way of knowing the many hidden dangers being buried at the Wayne Disposal Landfill.

Just the thought of PCB sealed in 55-gallon drums scares me and long after the landfill is covered over and grass growing will we find the dangers to our water resources.
We've witnessed many conflicting reports during the past year from the DNR and other authorities which later proved to be in error and we now have many suffering for life from the effects of PCB.

Can this happen in Van Buren Township?
If I had a choice I would question the benefits of the Landfill to Van Buren Township versus the potential dangers. Who will gain by the Landfill, it is real easy to measure the short term gain - Wayne Disposal.

I understand that Wayne Disposal has a lease on the property until the landfill is completed and then will leave the Township.

Will the original landowner assume all liability for the pollution left behind which endangers our water resources and be financially responsible when the real problem surfaces in the future?

We have a real example in New York State and we may learn a lesson from the history of a Chemical Company burying toxic materials and only years later to find the area polluted and forcing people to leave their homes.

Can this happen in Van Buren Township for the short term gain of a Landfill Operator?

I am reminded every day of this potential danger as I pass Willow Run Airport on I-94 and see the paper blowing over the Expressway and adjoining residential areas.

Even though weekly the Landfill operator hires the local Boy Scouts to clean the area it's a disgrace to Van Buren Township to allow this pollution to continue.

We should explore the background of the Landfill and review local and state codes for Landfill operations. Then review health departments regulations on how they monitor the rubbish and toxic materials allowed to be dumped in Van Buren Township.

We should all know who approved the permits and how they are renewed each year. Do we have public hearings and give the people effected a voice in granting of permits?

It is just hard to believe that Van Buren Township has anything to gain by permitting a Landfill to pollute our natural water resources and endanger many who still have wells for their water supply in our Township.

The way mothers feel

By JOYCE HAGELTHORN

Yesterday my son, the degree-holder, jobless pilot, sold his motorcycle.

It was a windy, gloomy day and I watched from the hall window as my slender, blond kid, who has some 40 hairs on his chin after six months of working at it, stood on the driveway and turned over the keys of his beloved motorcycle to another.

The other was a 68 year old man, short of stature, a big grin wrapped around his face, who was so excited he kept hopping off and on the bike, hardly paying attention to my kid who was showing him all the little extras that meant a lot to him.

George (our dog) kept walking around the bike sniffing at it, which shows that George is getting old, since a few years ago he would have been running around the bike and eating up the man who was buying it from his master.

My kid sold his bike because he is going to Oregon. He has the same sense of adventure and the same lump-in-the-throat producing symptoms that those early pioneers must have felt when they hit that old Oregon Trail. The difference is that my kid is going back to the land of his ancestors. And already he knows more about it than his mother, who was born and raised right next door to Oregon.

The day he is to leave had depended on the sale of his bike, which is going to finance his journey, and as I watched the older man struggle up on the machine, watched him rev it up and take off, leaving my kid standing there holding dollar bills in his hand while the wind ruffled his blond hair, my heart hurt.

This is the way mothers have always felt, I told myself. One spends a lot of years, loving and raising their children, only to have to say goodbye, God-Speed, and wonder when one will see them again.

As I watched my son from the window I saw a little blond kid who used to stand on the sofa watching his brother and sisters off to school.

"Someday I'm going way, way off," he would say and jumping from the sofa he would zoom around the room, ducking under chairs and behind furniture, making like an airplane. "Someday I'm going way 'round the world!"

Watching him standing there on the driveway I saw another day when a ten-year-old came trudging home through mud and sleet, with the wind whipping his hair . . . and soaking wet.

"What happened?" I shrieked. "My raft sunk," he cried, and big tears rolled down his face.

It was only later, after he had been bathed and dried, and the police came that I discovered that the soaking wet ten-year-old had been somewhat of a hero.

Seeking adventure he had built a raft and persuaded some other little guys to float down Rouge River with him.

It was a cold March day, but that didn't deter him, nor the other little fellows.

The raft had sunk. And my kid was the only one who could swim. He helped the other two to a tiny island, went back across the river, trudging up to a gas station and called the police . . . and then walked home, soaking wet.

None of them got pneumonia.

Looking from the window I saw him wrap his arms around George (our dog) and nuzzle him and I remembered the day that a sixteen year old, in a fit of temper, decided to leave home.

Carrying his 'wet suit' and his scuba diving gear he tied George to the porch, kissed him, ruffled his neck and took off down the street. Half-way down the block he stopped and turning around waved to the dog. The dog whimpered. A few more steps onward the boy took. The dog cried louder.

Turning, the boy trudged back and sat on the bottom step holding the dog. "Okay, okay," he murmured. "I won't leave you, old boy. I'll wait awhile."

"I wonder what he is thinking now," I whispered to myself as I watched him there on the driveway, ten years after he promised George he would wait awhile.

Maybe, just maybe, George will whimper . . . and my son will again, just wait awhile.

On the Brighter Side

You light up my life

By JIM BRADLEY

I love the beauty of flowers.

Their brilliant colors light up my life — and I don't have to be a botanist or horticulturist to admire them. I don't even know the names of most flowers.

But that doesn't keep me from admiring their radiance and fragrance.

Most of you aren't aware how electricity heats a stove and cools a refrigerator. Nor do many of you understand how the electric current flashes the gorgeous hues to your color television screen. Yet that doesn't keep you from enjoying hot food and cold drinks or from viewing your favorite TV shows.

But back to flowers. Their names are a part of my everyday existence. I have a wife named Pansy and a sister named Violet. (But she certainly isn't shrinking). Many women, in fact, are named after the colorful plants.

There's Rose, Lilly, Daisy and Chris (short for Chrysanthemum), to name a few which come to mind. Someone suggested, "I know someone named Blossom." Now that's not a flower, but part of one. Another person nearby just offered, Holly, by golly. (Sometimes this column is a joint effort).

Which reminds me of the joke, "If you're getting stiff in the joints, it's best to stay away from those joints!"

But back to flowers.

Did you know each flower is supposed to have a special meaning? I was reading an article recently that told about different flowers. It said that during Victorian times, if a young man sent a girl purple lilacs, he was also sending this message: "I'm falling in love with you!" (I haven't received any purple lilacs from any pretty girls lately. What does a red carnation mean?).

Time, was when courting was done through flowers, each of which had a special message. Red roses meant, "I love you."

Pansies meant, "I'm thinking of you all the time." (Thanks Pansy, I needed that!). And orange blossoms signified that a suitor had marriage on his mind.

I'm waiting now for someone to send me a bouquet of Pansies, mixed with roses and set in an arrangement of orange blossoms. Of course, it's 24 years and three grown sons too late for marriage. Besides, Pansy already has told me no one would marry me. The only reason she married me, she insists, is because she felt sorry for me. (But what she doesn't tell is the vast horde of girls she had to fight through to reach me and drag me down the aisle).

I threaten to trade her in for two "20's". She laughs and says I couldn't get one "80".

You know, we kid a lot about marriage even though it is serious business. Like, for instance, you know the honeymoon is over when he phones to say he'll be working late and she has already written a note saying dinner is in the refrigerator.

While I was courting Pansy, I took her to meet my parents when she was 21 years old. They loved her, but they still didn't approve of me.

I just read that single people die earlier than married ones. It figures. Haven't you always heard that marriage is slow death?

A bride-to-be sighed to her mother, "There are so many things to do before the wedding — and I don't want to overlook the most insignificant detail."

"Oh, don't worry," replied her mother, "I'll see that he's there."

Of all the pretty flowers in the world, I'll still take my Pansy. We were meant for each other. She's a budding genius and I'm a blooming idiot.

But after nearly 24 years of married bliss, Pansy is still my fragrant flower. And I hope she feels the same about me.

Because, after all, she still kinda grows on me.

The heavy hand of regulators

By Edwin Feulner

If you had asked me a month ago what 2,4,5-T is, I probably would have guessed a football formation.

But it's a pesticide, produced by Dow and several other chemical companies, under a variety of trade names. And it's caught right smack dab in the middle of U.S. regulatory politics.

Invoking its "emergency" powers, the EPA recently declared a halt to the spraying of 2,4,5-T. The ban was based on reports that the pesticide—which in headlines often is linked with the Vietnam war's notorious "Agent Orange"—may have caused miscarriages among some women exposed to it.

The scientific debate still is unresolved. Eteyl H. Blair, Vice President and Director of Health & Environmental Sciences for Dow maintains: "The bulk of scientific data gathered . . . over three decades of use demonstrate that there has never been a single documented incident of human injury resulting from normal agricultural use. . . . With regard to the allegations . . . (about) miscarriages, all we can say is that the report is totally unsubstantiated and at variance with previous scientific studies," including very recent government studies in Australia and New Zealand, giving the controversial pesticide a clean bill of health.

Dow's claims that 2,4,5-T does not pose extraordinary health hazards, incidentally, have been backed up by the Council on Agricultural Science and Technology (CAST) at Iowa State University and by numerous independent scientists. Dr. William Chappell, a forestry expert at Virginia Polytechnic Institute and State University, put it like this: "I just don't think there is any danger . . . I guess you could say I've bathed in it for 30 years and I have not been harmed and neither has anyone else I know who has worked with it." Then again, he's not a child-bearing aged female.

While possible health hazards are still being disputed, officials pretty much agree that the ban will have significant economic consequences.

A Virginia state forestry official, quoted in a Richmond newspaper, estimates that the ban will more than double the cost of reforesting timber land. And the U.S. Department of Agriculture has estimated that a permanent ban, over 50 years, would reduce lumber production by enough to build more than nine million homes.

But this is all technical stuff. And what we are more interested in are the regulatory politics which allow bureaucrats to ban products before scientific evidence is produced showing these products are harmful.

And even if they are harmful — as almost all chemicals are if improperly used — mustn't we ask ourselves whether a certain product or group of products doesn't perhaps do more good than harm — far more good? And wouldn't this be reason enough for not banning something like 2,4,5-T? In fact, aren't there certain acceptable risks that we as to modern, industrial society must be willing to take in order to feed and clothe the American people and most of the world?

These are all questions that are largely being overlooked by bureaucrats in their frenzy — mostly well-intentioned — to guard us against every real and imagined health hazard on earth.

Before his untimely death last fall (He had a heart attack, caused by the sting of a wasp), Dr. Robert H. White-Stevens, Chairman of the Bureau of Conservation and Environmental Science at Rutgers University, wrote a speech discussing these delicate risk-benefit questions, and suggested one sure way to impress upon the bureaucrats the harm that is being done by their overzealous if not neurotic regulatory policies.

Since the EPA also has banned the use of mirex, the only pesticide known to be effective against "fire ants," he suggested that EPA officials be required to camp out over a week-end in an Alabama field carrying 50 ant mounds per acre. "It might resolve the . . . argument in a hurry," he suggested.

And well it might. (Feulner is president of The Heritage Foundation, a Washington-based public policy research institute.)

Realizing a dream

Reflection on running in the Boston

me. The street at the start is narrow — old white wooden houses, mostly neat, with wide tree shaded lawns, line the way. The runners are orderly, no pushing or shoving, and strangely quiet. Most thoughts are turned inward thinking of what is ahead for the next two and a quarter to five or even six hours. I stand there looking at my watch as 12 noon approached oh, so slowly, and then finally the faint crack of the starter's gun is heard ahead.

"I'm Running the Boston!"

And we stand there, stock still. Away up front, I see the heads begin to bob up and down — there is no sense of forward motion to the heads — just this crazy-looking bobbing up and down motion. After 20 seconds or so, we begin to walk and continue to walk for what seems to be an interminable time — I turn to the person next to me and say: "This is my kind of pace."

He grins and says: "Yeah, at this rate, I think I'll make it."

We finally break into a slow trot accelerating very slowly and then suddenly come to an abrupt halt, and then, just as suddenly, for the first time break into a real run. And then the euphoria hits me as I realize I am really doing this wonderful, beautiful thing — running the Boston Marathon!

For the past month of training, running those 12 miles every weekday without a miss, doing the 17, 18, 19, or 20 milers on Saturdays and Sundays, the one fear lurking in the back of my head has been: "What if something happens to keep me from going — the flu, an injury..." But now I'm in it, I'm running, I'm physically ready, and I will do it!

At what may or may not be the first mile mark, someone along the roadside calls out: "Eleven minutes, 48 seconds." In most of my previous marathons, the first mile has been covered in around 6:30 — the guy next to me with the jazzy digital wrist watch apparently noticing my disbelief says: "Yeah, we took one minute and 58 seconds just to cross the starting line." "What the hell", I say to myself, "You're not here to break any records — enjoy the experience." And from there on, I relax and do.

Two miles out runners are actually stopping to walk — other runners heading for the trees along the roadside for rest stops. At two miles — unbelievable. The people: scattered groups along the roadside at first, but in the towns and growing along the way, huge throngs — in places narrowing the runner's path to a one person side lane. The estimate in that night's paper — from 800,000 to one million spectators. And all of them seem to be in love with the runners, and the runners with them, and everyone with each other. The spectators are cheering the runners, the runners are cheering the spectators and it is the most fantastic feeling I have ever experienced.

The high point of spectator participation has to be Wellesley. Every girl from the college must be out lining both sides of the roadway for several blocks. They are cheering, they are waving, they break into a go-go-go-go-go chant and there can't be a runner running this lovely gauntlet who doesn't pick up his pace a bit and feel a renewed surge of energy.

On past Wellesley at around the 16-mile mark is the Charles River and then for five miles or so the "dreaded" hills of Newton. We actually only gain a total of 170 feet in elevation from the Charles to the top of "Heartbreak Hill" near Boston College. Most people from this area wouldn't even notice these gentle slopes, and I certainly don't find them especially challenging.

After Heartbreak Hill, it is all downhill the rest of the way as we leave the little country towns and pass into the suburbs of Boston. I suddenly realize that I am in some danger of not finishing the race, officially that is, of not coming in under 3½ hours, and I pick up my pace. From this point on I run faster and faster and I am passing literally dozens of runners each block, and of course it is at this point that I also start passing the walkers as well.

Those who in running parlance have "hit the wall" and ran out of gas around the 22 mile mark.

As I thunder on down Beacon Street and cross the railroad overpass, one mile from the finish, my watch shows that I have about seven minutes or so left to get under 3:30 and I accelerate a bit more. Fantastically I am feeling better the faster I run and I complete the last mile in well under six minutes, crossing the finish line going all out. My watch shows a time of around 3:28 which a fellow finisher confirms, but I won't know my official time and place for another six weeks or so when the results are mailed out.

Boat launching facilities now open at metroparks

Boat launching facilities within the Huron-Clinton metroparks are now open, including those at Metro Beach Metropark near Mt. Clemens, Stony Creek Metropark near Rochester and Utica and Kensington Metropark near Milford.

All watercraft users are required to have a 1979 boat permit which costs $7 annual regular, $4 for senior citizens and $2 daily, as well as the vehicle entry permit of $7 regular, $2 for senior citizens and $2 daily.

Watercraft operators using the metroparks must comply with the Marine Safety Act of 1976, plus local watercraft ordinances and Huron-Clinton metropark rules. There is a 10-mile speed limit on the lakes, and no water skiing is permitted at Stony Creek Lake and Kent Lake (in Kensington Metropark).

Metro Beach Metropark, a 740-acre site near Mt. Clemens, has launching ramps that accommodate up to eight boats simultaneously, located along the Black Creek, which provide access to Lake St. Clair. Parking is available for 210 boat trailers and cars, and additional parking is available in the main parking lot.

Dur to high water along the Black Creek and Lake St. Clair, park officials caution boaters that the "No Wake" ordinance will be strictly enforced. Vehicles remaining in the park overnight are charged $2 (in addition to the metropark boating permit fees).

The ramps are open 7 a.m. to dusk. The park is open daily 8 a.m. to dusk, (to 10 p.m. starting May 27). The park phones are 463-4581 (Mt. Clemens) or 963-3022 (Detroit).

Stony Creek Metropark, a 3,990-acre site north of Utica and near Rochester, has ramps that permit up to 10 simultaneous launchings and parking spaces for up to 150 cars and trailers located at the south end of Stony Creek Lake. The launch site has a building and restrooms, lounge area, vending machines for food service and a snack bar on weekends.

Park hours are 8 a.m. to 8 p.m. daily through May 25 and 8 a.m. to 10 p.m. May 26 through the remainder of the boating season.

For details phone 781-4242 (Washington exchange).

Trailers, cars and boats are not permitted to remain in Stony Creek Metropark overnight (except for those boats and trailers in the land storage area, which have been rented for the season).

Kensington Metropark, a 4,350-acre site near Milford, has two large boat launching sites on Kent Lake. Kent Lake covers 1,200 acres and is popular with fishermen and boaters. Bluegills, bass and crappies are caught in the lake.

At the East boat launching site, six boats may be launched at one time, with space for 60 cars and trailers and additional spaces for car parking only. The West boat launching site has space for 125 cars and boat trailers, with six to eight simultaneous launchings available at the 120-foot ramp.

Launching hours are 6 a.m. to 9 p.m. and the park closes at 10 p.m. Trailers, cars and boats are not permitted to remain overnight in Kensington Metropark.

For details phone 685-1561 (Milford).

Cooking facilities 'grow' at J building

Expanded "scratch cooking" facilities at the J Building seniors center in Westland will be celebrated with a grand opening Thursday from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m.

The kitchen renovations, which have taken 18 months to complete, will enable the Out-County Nutrition Program to lower its average cost per meal from $1.31 to 95 cents.

"Although many meals must still be catered," said Caroline Lewis, director of nutrition, "the new scratch cooking facilities reduces this need which results in the lower cost."

"And anytime we can lower our costs, we can increase the quality of the food or the number of people served."

The cooking facility accommodates some 500 seniors from the communities of Canton, Plymouth, Inkster, Van Buren, Sumpter, Huron, Inkster and Westland, in addition to the J Building. With the expansion, 250 more seniors could be accommodated.

Renovations, which were partially funded by federal money received last year, included bringing the building and existing equipment up to code, purchasing new equipment and adding more staff.

"It has been a long project," said Ms. Lewis, "but we are really in ship-shape order now and very proud of it!"

Invitations to the grand opening have been extended to all members of the Wayne County Board of Commissioners, the Commission on Aging and the Nutrition Program's Project Council.

Concert features Dixieland

Audiences can get into the swing of original Dixieland jazz at Henry Ford Museum's Sunday Historical Concert Series program as Uncle Orrin's Society Orchestra Stompers bring back the music of turn-of-the-century New Orleans, and Chicago nightspots during the roaring 1920s.

These musicians recreate all the paths of a blues solo and all the abandon of a march. The program naturally would not be complete without the group's rendition of that spirited old standard and symbol of Dixieland music, "When the Saints Go Marching In."

Audiences everywhere recognize the free soaring sounds and ragtime rhythm of Dixieland jazz. The many familiar tunes during the concert will evoke the origins of this variety of music — those New Orleans clubs where musicians, ignoring the confines of written music, improvised and sometimes composed new tunes on the spot.

The stompers are led by Orrin Foslien, a musician and entertainer of national stature, and include the most exciting Dixieland soloists in this area.

There is no additional charge beyond the regular museum admission for the concert, which is at 3:30 p.m. in the museum theater.

Naturalist program planned

A sensitivity walk will be held at the nature study area of Oakwoods Metropark near Flat Rock on Sunday at 10 a.m.

Park Naturalists Glenn Dent and Fred Wooley will lead visitors through a variety of sensory experiences involving sight, smell, touch, hearing and taste. "A blindfolded trust walk" also will be included in this two-hour program to help tune-in to the sensations of a spring morning.

ANP unveils All-Area volleyball

All-stater paces girls' top squad

SHARON FONTAINE

KELLY HEATON

Japan has always been the hub of international women's volleyball. Oh, yes, Russian women muscle their way into the finals of the Olympics and then there are the Bulgarians and, of course, the United States.

And one reason why the U.S.A. figures among the top is because of volleyball's popularity on the West coast where Californians have made the "spikers and setters" a way of life on the beaches.

But, Michigan is slowly and surely joining the ranks of the volleyball powers, thanks to the popularity of the sport at the high school level.

And some of the area teams, such as Livonia Churchill, Wayne Memorial and Westland John Glenn, have earned state-wide recognition for their excellence in the gruelling sport.

The three schools contribute the bulk of the players for the ANP's inaugural All-Area team which honors 12 outstanding athletes. The impressive line-up includes Livonia Churchill's Stacy O'Toole and Linda Mix; Wayne Memorial's Debbie Mazurek, Sharon Fontaine and Patti Rogowski; Westland John Glenn's Mary Crechiolo and Jody Humphries; Plymouth Canton's Kelly Heaton and Salem's Monette Recto; Livonia Franklin's Sue Patton and Dawn Muller, along with Belleville's Debi Cammett.

HEATON has a string of accolades during her superb career as a member of Coach Cyndi Burnstein's teams. A four-year performer who was named to the All-Western Six Conference teams for the past two years, Kelly utilized her height (5-she's six-foot) and her leap to become deadly as a spiker, one of the most powerful the area has produced. Her talents earned coveted all-state recognition and she was also the Chiefs' MVP and captain for the past two years.

"Not only is Kelly a powerful spiker," says Coach Burnstein, "but she is an excellent net player and an all-around athlete."

MAZUREK is only one of two juniors drafted for the ANP's team. A 5 feet, 6 inch defensive standout, Miss Mazurek was picked as a member of the Great Lakes 8 Conference team after the Zebras finished the season undefeated in the league.

"Debbie definitely was our best defensive player," stressed Wayne Coach Doris Busuito. "Along with the defense, she is also the best passer and receiver. Her accuracy paved the way for our very successful offense and she kept the opposition off-balance most of the time because she developed a deceptive left hand spike."

team which helped us win many games. Her serve was also consistent and she had many aces."

RECTO was the mainstay of Coach Himes' 5-1 offensive strategy. Her athletic acuity caught the eyes of Ferris State scouts who awarded the Salem setter a full-ride scholarship.

"Monette has been with the varsity squad only two years," commented Coach Himes, "and during that period she has been indispensable to our team. Her contribution has made this team a threat against all of our rivals."

CRECHIOLO is as versatile as they come. A tough competitor who has been a member of the Westland John Glenn varsity squad for the past three years, she was the Rockets' No. 1 point-getter.

"Mary also is a rare and natural athletic talent," said Coach Sharon Turflinger. "She has earned nine varsity letters during her outstanding career."

Crechiolo was also designated as the Rockets co-captain and she's deadly with their "smashes" and net play as well.

HUMPHRIES will return next year to the Rocket line-up and she is expected to form the nucleus for another superb team. A junior who was placed in the center in Coach Turflinger's strategy, Jody was a powerful spiker who had that unique quickness to be where a player needed to pass the ball. A member of the elite Northwest Suburban Conference squad as well, look for Jody to earn state-wide recognition a year from now.

PATTON, like the famous general, was born to lead. Her all-around abilities - as a spiker, setter, net and away from the net play - earned for her the MVP Patriots' award for the past two years. She also named to the all-conference first team.

"Sue's exceptional passing ability and her undaunted blocks helped us become a winner," said Franklin Coach Joe Janesek. "She was really harmony in motion out there on the floor and a delight to watch."

MULLER has been the center attraction for the Patriots these past four years and she has been the key to the defense as well as the offensive strategy. Named as one of the two co-captains, Miss Muller provided the Patriots with leadership in a league that is loaded with talent.

"She's truly been an outstanding all-around performer for us," said

Rain, Rain go away

By TOM MOORADIAN
ANP Sports Editor

Ernie Righetti was out on the streets running his laps when my car caught up to him on Wayne Rd. near Ford Rd. The Wayne track coach has put on some pounds since the days since he was sprinting for Coach Bill Hawley at Wayne and Eastern Michigan University.

"We got back late Saturday night, so I didn't bother giving you a ring," Righetti said as he paused from his early morning jog. "There's nothing to say except that Tolson placed sixth."

Righetti was referring to his ace distance runner, Doug Tolson who led the Wayne delegation to the Mansfield, Ohio swamp. "The only thing that made news down there was the weather."

And where hasn't the weather made the news this spring? "It poured rain on Friday and it rained and hailed on Saturday when we left - it was the worst possible weather you can could imagine for track," Righetti added.

The Wayne coach echoed the sentiments of all (no exceptions) of the area coaches. It is the first time in recent memory that almost all high school athletic activity has come to a halt.

There have been a mere two - count them - two baseball games played in this area and, according to most schedules, we're at "mid-season".

Coaches have my sympathy. But the M.E. (managing editor) isn't moping out any to this department. He says, "fill those sports pages."

So please Mr. Weatherman, would you give us all a break? Oh, by the way, Tolson finished sixth at Mansfield in the 3,000 meter run. He was clocked in 8:42.0. If Mansfield proved anything, it showed that the Wayne junior isn't a "mudder", one of those who enjoys galloping in the mud.

Ex-Cage star praises Coach Davis

Veteran basketball coach Gordie Davis recently announced his retirement as the head mentor at Westland John Glenn and one of his former stars, Dave Carlington, who is in Alabama wrote the following letter:

DEAR MR. MOORADIAN:
Recently it came to my attention here in Birmingham, Alabama that Gordie Davis retired as basketball coach at John Glenn High School. As I read your column, I was bombarded by a flurry of memories of Coach Davis teams, and the personal as well as community excitement surrounding the season. Needless to say that with Coach Davis' departure, a part of this now seems lost.

Coach Davis has laid the foundation and established a sound basketball tradition in Westland. He has brought recognition and pride, to not only the school, but an entire community.

Davis' accomplishments have not come without hard work. I only wish everyone could witness his intensity and commitment from a player's eyes. He has not only demonstrated his ability as a successful coach, but as a fine man. His positive principles about life have helped me personally and I know others through difficult times.

Coach Gordie Davis, with his unique player sensitivity, style, and charisma, will be sorely missed by both players and fans and his colleagues.

Thank you for letting me express myself about this outstanding man.

Sincerely, David Carlington.
Ex-John Glenn cager

And, thank you, David for taking time out to write.

Dear Tom:

Just a note to say hello and tell you that while in the area a few weeks ago, I read your column about Gordie Davis' retirement and I really enjoyed it. In my coaching career, I have never met a finer example of what a coach should stand for. A gentleman in every situation; gracious in defeat and humble in victory. I hope my son is fortunate enough to play for someone like him.

I hope everything is well with you and I'm happy you are still prominent in the athletic scene. You do a tremendous job. I hope to run into you one of these days.

the Patriots' coach. "And if we could 'red shirt' her a year," he quipped, "we'd be state champs next year."

MIX completes a super ANP lineup which would give any in the state a run for its money. She's a 5-3 performer who defies the opposition to hit anywhere near her. Quickness on defense and offense, Linda displays uncanny ability to be at the right spot at the right time. Because of her fantastic vertical leap - she goes up 22 inches - she can spike the ball with tremendous velocity.

On paper, Belleville looks like contender Tiger pitching is questionable

It was the rains that did Belleville in last year.

And "mother nature" is doing it again to Coach Dan Fisher's ball club again this year.

Belleville got off to an excellent start a year ago before rain took the momentum out of the Tigers who came back after an unscheduled five days rest and "couldn't buy a hit."

"And rain is frustrating us again," Coach Fisher said. "We have had five games, including two conference games washed out because of rain and sleet."

Belleville will attempt to launch the belated 1979 season Thursday when it will host Ypsilanti for a doubleheader starting at noon. The Tigers will host that one and also host Livonia Franklin on Saturday for another twin bill.

And, again the elements will play a key role in getting the season launched. According to the weatherman, rains were scheduled to drop last night which would again cloud the opener.

It's a shame because Belleville could field one of its finest ball clubs in recent years. Coach Fisher has a host of holdovers from last year's club that went 7-11 over-all. The notables include converted now first baseman, Jim Mercurio, second baseman Paul Arnett, shortstop, Rick Elgas, and third baseman Larry Cicotte.

The four form the nucleus of what Fisher hopes will be an exciting team.

But the all-important pitching staff is questionable, and that, as any coach will tell ya, is the key to any winning season.

But Tom Montgomery, a 6-5, 220-pound senior, should help provide some consistency. The righthanded Montgomery has the tools and a fastball to put the Tigers in the thick of the Suburban 8 Conference title race.

And Belleville will receive some help in the form of a Wyandotte Roosevelt transfer student, a southpaw at that, Tim Wallace who made the Bruins a contender in the Great Lakes 8 is a valuable asset that Fisher hopes will reap dividends.

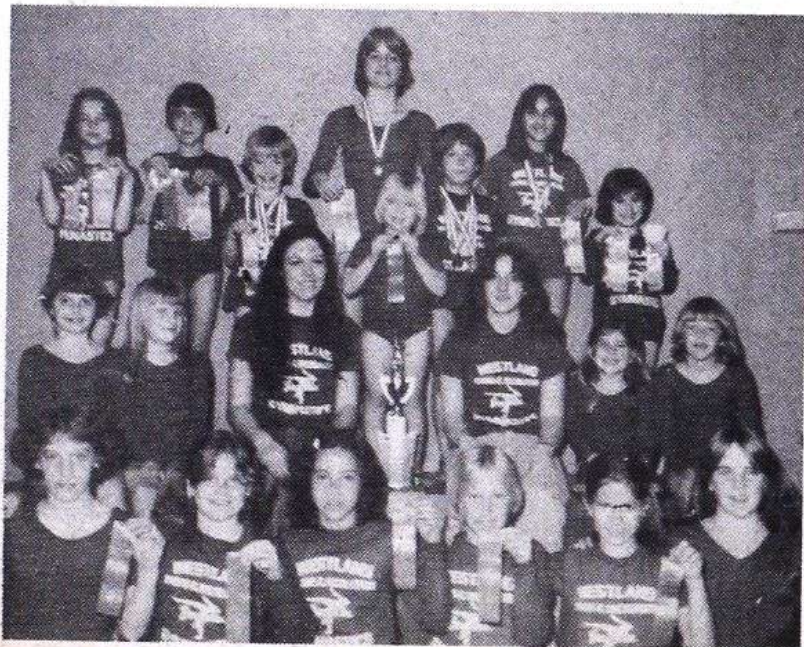

Montgomery and Wallace are being groomed as the Tigers' 1-2 punch, but there's Kevin Frye, who has a powerful arm which will be used on the mound and in the outfield, according to the Belleville coach.

Add to these, prospective pitchers Mike Vance, a righthander, David Stamper, who catches as well as

They're champs

Westland Parks and Recreation's Bendables also proved they unbeatable in gymnastics as they capture the first place trophy at their own invitational. Members of the team include Amy Mellert (bottom row, from right), Missy Feher, Tanya Verdis, Debbie Tomasko, Angel Heathcote, Tricia Breshnam; second row are.....Michelle Coleman, Coach Cindy Goddard, Kim Tomaska, Coach Debbie Fisher, Missy Leininger, and Hether Petite; top row (from right) are Adria Haught, Debbie Jablonski, Tonya Braswell, Mary Kubiak, Dawn Cooper, Jami Blazer and Shannan Ridel. Westland garnered 280.30 points, while Ann Arbor's Aerial-Lites had 255.9 and the Downriver YMCA posted 226.51. The fourth team, Ypsilanti, finished with 131.85 points.

Romulus basketball clinic dates are set

Basketball will be the name of the game for boys and girls who sign up for the 5-week Romulus and parks and recreation department sponsored clinic.

The clinic will be held five consecutive Saturdays beginning April 28 and ending on May 26. Participants will receive instructions from Romulus Head Coach Rod Hanna and his staff.

Open to boys, ages 8 to 18, the clinic will stress fundamentals, but scrimmages will be held. Boys, ages 8 to 12, will practice from 8:30 to 10:30 a.m.; junior and senior high will take over at 10:30 and practice until 12:30 p.m.

The clinic will be held at North Junior High.

Roaring start for Romulus ving Dearborn Heights wood in the dust, Romulus ads got off to a roaring start eek as Coach Al Wilkerson's s buried the Chargers 97-35 in st dual track meet of the 1979 n.

Despite rains that made it a day for the mudders, Romulus took two of the three relays and swept nine of the 16 events.

"This should be an interesting year for us," said Coach Wilkerson who came within a couple of fractions of posting a undefeated season a year ago. "We have a lot of talent on this team and, given a chance, we should be an excellent club."

Darren Cline, recently named to The Associated Newspapers' All-Area wrestling team, began his senior track season with a pair of wins. He claimed a first in the discus with a toss of 122 feet, 1/2 inch and also won the shot put with a 46 feet, 4 1/2 inch effort.

Wilkerson's Eagles returned from their vacation on Monday and will face a strong Monroe contingent, a team that could shatter Romulus' plans for an untarnished year.

Fox is too sly for state power

Wayne hurler give Zebras their second

BY TOM MOORADIAN
ANP Sports Editor

Wayne Memorial had to head north to find decent weather to play over the weekend and Coach Jim Chronowski may have found a solid pitcher in Billy Fox.

Fox, a righthanded junior, hurled a six-hitter to beat Class A state powerhouse, Grand Ledge, 7-2 in the nightcap of a doubleheader at Lansing Harry Hill.

Lansing beat their visitors 6-4 in the opener as Wayne's Roger Breeding sustained his first setback of the young campaign.

"This was only our second time out," Coach Chronowski commented, "and we were much improved. The pitching however is still in the developmental stages but I did like the performances turned in by

Fox and Ray Lanczki. (Lanczki picked up the save after relieving Fox in the fifth.)

Wayne may not get an opportunity to play on its home field this season. The diamond was mired in water Monday and with rains expected Tuesday and Wednesday, the Zebras have received delivery on an outdoor swim pool which obviously Chronowski and his players didn't want at this time - or any other time.

Fox gave up two runs, struck three and walked two in his innings of work, while Lanczki looked good as he notched five and walked only one.

Both teams scored in the first. Wayne broke it open in the first with a three-run outburst. Inning, Joe Guetta sliced a double off of losing pitcher Fisher, then Bill Spaw hit a line-drive over the 315 foot

Rain and rebuilding are top concerns for Cherry Hill '9

Rain isn't the only element that is on Coach Ken Mientkiewicz these days. Though the inclement weather has forced the Cherry Hill baseball coach to remain indoors, he also has to rebuild a Spartan club that has only four leftovers from last year's super 16-6 team.

"The rain has hurt us more than the other clubs, I feel, because we are young and were really depending on getting outside to see what we have. I would hate to begin league play without at least a couple of out-of-conference games under our belts," Mientkiewicz said.

Games with Clarenceville and Dundee were washed out because of the rains and the Spartans expected to get in their opener Tuesday at Inkster Park against Garden City East. They also have a 10 a.m. at home game scheduled Friday with Willow Run and a 1 p.m. contest the same day with Romulus.

Mientkiewicz is rebuilding around four seniors - shortstop Brian Hewitt, first baseman Jerome Potvin, outfielder Rick Searcy - all of whom are slated for mound duty as well - and Marc Friar, also an outfielder.

Tiger-Reds' game to aid local teams

Baseball's million dollar club should have a new member this month.

And it couldn't happen to a more deserving group. Gate receipts from this year's Sandlot Benefit exhibition game scheduled for Monday, April 23, with the Cincinnati Reds should push the total from the last 10 engagements over the million dollar mark with all funds used for the purchase of equipment and other support of amateur baseball in the Michigan-Ohio-Ontario area.

"That's a tribute to all baseball fans in this area who realize that baseball starts in the sandlots and it takes money to promote," said Billy Burton, former Tiger outfield star and general manager of the benefit game for the sixth straight year.

Last year's game produced $172,929.70 in ticket sales, pushing the total of the last nine games to $851,298.19.

Although the Tigers hold an 8-2 advantage over the Reds since they have met regularly on a home-and-home basis since 1974, they face no easy task. Offensively the Reds are loaded with such sluggers as George Foster, Johnny Bench, Joe Morgan and Dan Driessen - and all are expected to play.

Tickets for this year's game have been distributed through the Michigan Recreation and Parks Association and can be picked up at the local parks and recreation department offices. A limited number of tickets are still available at the Tiger Stadium.

Ticket prices, unchanged from the last season, remain at $6 for box seats, $5 for reserved, $3.50 for general admission and $2 for bleachers.

The Tigers and Reds were scheduled to play in Cincinnati on April 18 for the benefit of amateur baseball in that area.

Wayne rips Taylor netters

Coach Jack Armstrong and his Wayne netters began their chase to catch defending Great Lakes 8 Conference champ, Monroe, with a 7-0 shutout of Taylor Center.

"We have more depth than we have ever had in the past," revealed Coach Armstrong who began his sixth year at the helm of the tennis team. "And, as it has been ever since I have taken over the tennis program, Monroe is again the team to beat in our league. They have consistently been the No.1 team in the Great Lakes."

Armstrong's netters could change that if the pieces fall in the right places as they did against Taylor. There was no question about the outcome of that one as the Zebras dominated both the singles and doubles competitions.

Recreation and Park Association and developed in cooperation with the President's Council on Physical Fitness.

All youngsters compete in three skill categories: pitching at a target, running the base path for speed and hitting for distance.

The local competition is the first stop on the road to competition for national titles before thousands of people during the All-Star game festivities July 17 for distance.

Local competition will be held throughout May at more than 1,700 sites across the country.

Four local finalists from each site will advance to district competitions, to be held between June 1-16. Each district will send eight champions on to division competitions at 12 Major League ballparks between June 21-July 7.

Eight division winners will compete during All-Star game festivities in Seattle, where they and their families will be the guests of Major League baseball and Burger King and get to meet both All-Star teams.

Reitz earns cage stripe

Freshman Gene Reitz, an ex-All-Area cager, cross country ace from New Boston Huron, appeared in ten games for Grand Valley State's basketball team this season.

Reitz scored 12 points for a 1.2 average and is considered one of the top-notch players to nail down a starting berth next season. He also collected 10 rebounds and had five assists and a steal.

Grand Valley finished one of its finest seasons in history winning the Great Lakes 8 Conference championship and NAIA District 23 crown. Coach Tom Villmure led the club to a 25-5 record.

Whale of a season

Despite their 4-4 won-lost record, the Whales made some progress in the age group swimming this season. Under the guidance of ex-All-Area and All-State swimmer, Rick Kogelschatz, the Cherry Hill sponsored tankers went on to finish third in their league. Members of the 1978-79 club include Dan McLeod (front row, from left) Monique Baxter, Keith Perry, Gail Lianan, Tricia Reside, John Gerometta, Scott Reside and Chris Pryor; second row are Cyndy Lackas, Raimi Bilek, Tina Pierson, Jacque Trudeau, Jamie Sheahan, Barb Sawchuck, Martine Michiewicz and Kim Nikula; second row are assistant

pitches, Robert Watts and Belleville may also solve its pitching problems.

However, Fisher and his Tigers won't know unless the weatherman doesn't resolve his identity problems.

Belleville has one of the three outfield positions up for grabs. With Frye nailing down one spot and Johnny Nowak in the second, seniors Wayne Morris and Lloyd Dubisky will be battling junior John Lozen for the last opening.

Fisher sees Plymouth Salem and Livonia Bentley as the "toughies" in the league and the Tigers will have to muscle their way past the perennial powers in order to realize any title ambitions.

Out of the league they have Livonia Stevenson, Franklin and Ypsilanti to contend with.

"It's really a tough and ambitious schedule," Fisher said.

See what happens when you get an athletic director who coached baseball for eons, Dan?

Mientkiewicz' 1978 team remained in the thick of the Tri-River Conference title race until the final weeks when Garden City West and Taylor Kennedy put on a sport that ended in a dead heat for first place.

"With rain and rebuilding our major concerns," Mientkiewicz added, "I really don't know what to expect at this point."

Wheat germ gives roulade special taste

Versatile vacuum packed wheat germ is a super food for fitness. It is at home in gourmet dishes as well as in meatloaf or the cereal bowl. In fact, many of the elegant lighter entrees made with cheese and eggs benefit greatly from wheat germ.

Wheat germ's subtle nutlike taste adds flavor interest and extra heartiness. Furthermore, wheat germ contributes valuable nutrients like high quality protein, iron, the B vitamins and vitamin E. This unique combination of so many important nutrients makes wheat germ a favorite food with health conscious cooks.

The words alone, Wheat Germ Vegetable Roulade, tell you to expect something special. Just one look and nibble confirm the fact that it is, indeed, party fare. Furthermore, for all this entree's impressive appearance and eating qualities, it is relatively inexpensive to make. This elegant idea for spring entertaining came from the Kretschmer wheat germ consumer information specialists. Make the colorful vegetable filling with zucchini or broccoli.

Basically, the roulade is a rolled souffle with a savory vegetable filling. Wheat germ and parsley are blended into the airy egg mixture before it is spread in a shallow baking pan. After baking, the sheet of souffle is topped with a mixture of sauteed zucchini, mushrooms, onion and wheat germ. Then it's rolled to form the roulade. Follow the step-by-step recipe directions and handle carefully. A delicate wine sauce is marvelous spooned over the roulade. The sauce recipe made with milk and white wine goes together quickly and easily.

Accompany the wheat germ vegetable roulade with a crisp salad, finger rolls and fresh seasonal fruit for a beautiful food party menu.

WHEAT GERM VEGETABLE ROULADE

1/2 cup butter
1/4 cup flour
2 cups milk
4 eggs, separated
1/4 teaspoon salt
3/4 cup vacuum packed wheat germ, regular
1/2 cup minced parsley
1 medium zucchini, diced (about 1 cup), or one cup frozen broccoli cuts

Something special

Just one look and a nibble and you'll know that Wheat Germ Vegetable Roulade is something special. Great for spring entertaining, this entree has an impressive appearance and eating qualities, but is relatively inexpensive to make, great in these price-conscious times.

"GALL STONES"

One of the most common stomach disorders in adults is disease of the gall bladder. What causes the gall bladder to malfunction? How are gall stones formed?

THE LIVER AND THE GALL BLADDER

The principal function of the liver, the largest gland of the body, is to produce bile. Bile is a fluid necessary for intestinal digestion.

The gall bladder is a small pouch which stores the bile produced by the liver. It is a pear-shaped sac on the under surface of the right lobe of the liver, connected to it by tissue.

During digestion, bile flows from the liver to the duodenum, the first section of the small intestine. Between meals bile is stored in the gall bladder until it is needed.

THE FORMATION OF GALL STONES

When more bile is produced than can be used and stored by the body, this bile stagnates in the gall bladder and becomes excessively concentrated. Like all other fluids produced by the body, bile contains a small percent of mineral matter.

When chronic inflammation, excessive heat or concentrated bile occur in the gall bladder, the mineral elements of the bile crystallize and collect. They may adhere to particles of bile pigment. The movement of the gall bladder causes these particles to rotate, collecting other particles. In time a stone is formed; a stone formed in the gall bladder is called a gall stone. Gall stones may remain in the gall bladder an indefinite time without producing symptoms of any kind. A gall bladder may function normally although filled with gall stones. Eventually, however, the sharp-edged stones irritate the lining of the gall bladder or leave the gall bladder, passing through the bile ducts. When this occurs it is accompanied by intense pain.

SYMPTOMS OF GALL BLADDER DISEASE

Early signs of gall bladder problems are fullness and distention of the abdomen, associated with much belching. This distress may come after eating. Pain may be present in the form of a dull ache.

A gall bladder attack begins suddenly, with severe pain in the right side, just below the ribs. It may travel toward the right shoulder because this is the path of the nerves leading from the spine to the liver. There also may be chills and fever.

During the attack, the liver becomes swollen and tender. Vomiting and excessive perspiration may be present. Gall bladder attacks may last a few hours or several days, ending when the stone is expelled finally into the small intestine, where it passes with fecal matter.

THE CHIROPRACTIC APPROACH TO HEALTH

The fundamental law of physics is every effect must have a cause. The chiropractic approach to health is to find the cause of disease, not merely to treat symptoms. We have stated that gall stones are the result of mineral elements of the bile collecting and crystallizing when inflammation, excessive heat or concentrated bile occurs in the gall bladder. The question which naturally arises is, what causes the gall bladder to malfunction?

THE BASIC CAUSE OF DISEASE

Proper function of all organs, muscles, tissues and cells of the body depends on a normal supply of vital nerve energy transmitted from the brain and carried by the great trunk nerves to every part of the body.

The vital nerve flow passes from the brain to the trunk nerves by way of the spinal cord, which is surrounded and protected by the spinal column.

If a misalignment should occur somewhere within the 26 bone segments of the spinal column called the vertebrae, sacrum and coccyx, this normal nerve supply becomes distorted.

It is this abnormally stimulated or decreased nerve supply which causes disease.

HOW CHIROPRACTIC HELPS

In the case of a malfunctioning gall bladder, the chiropractor adjusts the vertebra which is causing the interference. If gall stones have formed, chiropractic care will reduce the inflammation or heat and secretion will resume a normal character. This chemical action of the normal secretion will dissolve the stones. The best approach to a permanent solution to gall stones or any other health problem is to see your chiropractor regularly. Maintain your good health by preventing disease!

MR. AND MRS.
DANIEL ELLIS
...Denise A. Bergmooser

Bergmooser-Ellis rite held at St. Stephen's Church

Altar and church decorations of red roses and large white satin bows with pink roses set the mood for the March 10 nuptial of Denise A. Bergmooser and Daniel S. Ellis.

The double-ring ceremony was held at St. Stephen's Catholic Church in New Boston and officiated by The Rev. Alexander Wytral. Music was by the church choir.

For the late afternoon ceremony the bride wore a white giana polyester knit gown by William Cahill of California. The bodice was trimmed with lace and delicate designs. Lace also trimmed the high neckline, and sheer wrist-point sleeves complimented the attire.

A lace and embroidered cap held her waist-length veil, which also was trimmed with lace. Her bridal bouquet was of pink and white silk roses and baby's breath, gathered with long satin and Chantilly lace streamers.

The bride was given in marriage by her father. She is the daughter of Richard and Alice Bergmooser of Barth Street, Romulus.

The bride asked Ellen Kay Burkhardt of Flat Rock to serve as her maid of honor. She wore a soft rose-colored gown, trimmed at the neck and sleeves in old lace and gathered and belted at the waist. Her headpiece was of pink and cranberry roses.

The bridesmaid was Kathy L. Bergmooser, sister of the bride. Her A-line gown was of deep cranberry color, with large cap sleeves. She also wore pink and cranberry colored flowers in her hair.

Both attendants carried large baskets of mixed silk flowers, matching the colors of their gowns, and silk streamers.

Flowergirl was Karen Ellis, sister of the groom, who wore a silk carnation headband and carried a basket of carnations and daisies.

The groom, the son of Samuel and Joyce Ellis of Grosse Pointe, asked David B. Ellis, of Southfield to serve as best man. The usher was Dale B. Ellis of Grosse Pointe. Both men are brothers of the groom.

The Georgian Inn in Roseville was the site of the reception for newlyweds and 150 guests.

Following the party, the newlyweds left for a one-week honeymoon in Vail, Colo.

The new Mrs. Ellis is a 1976 graduate of Romulus Senior High School. Her husband is a 1970 graduate of Grosse Pointe High School and a 1974 graduate of Eastern Michigan University, where he received his bachelor's degree in business. He is a member of the Professional Ski Instructors of America and is employed by F.E.G. Tool and Gage Co. of Troy.

Miss Smith to wed David Blackstone

Miss Smith, who is employed by the university as a switchboard operator, is a member of the Chi Kappa Delta Literary Society.

Her fiancé is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Clayton M.

Blackstone of Perham, Maine. A 1974 graduate of Washburn District High School in Washburn, Maine, he completed studies for a bachelor of science degree in business management at Bob Jones University in 1978.

He currently is employed by the Stone Manufacturing Co. of Orangeburg, S.C.

His fraternal affiliations included the Epsilon Zeta Chi Literary Society. He is a current member of the Bob Jones University Alumni Association.

The couple will exchange their wedding vows in a 7:30 p.m. service June 8 at Martha Mary Chapel in Greenfield Village, Dearborn.

VB Garden Club sees slide show on Dutch flowers

"Flowers of Holland" presented by Norma Torr, was the program enjoyed by the members of the Van Buren Garden Club when they met in April at the home of Mrs. Frank Prais of Liberty Street.

The colored slides, taken by Ms. Torr when she and Mrs. Prais toured Holland, included tree-lined canals, picturesque windmills, diminutive flower beds in front of house boats, tiny gardens and the colorful hay wagons and hay rakes of Freisland, and the world famous Keukenhof Gardens in Lisse.

The fields of tulips were dazzling with intense colors and the massive display of amaryllis was breathtaking.

Keukenhof Gardens formerly were part of the castle of a nobleman and consists of 70 acres planted to formal gardens featuring hundreds of varieties of tulips, as well as grape hyacinth, daffodils, flowering shrubs, rhododendron, hyacinths and magnificent old trees. Swans glide by in the tree-shaded ponds and baby ducklings waddle in and out of the water. Huge floral arrangements were displayed in the greenhouses, featuring lilies and Fuji mums.

At the close of the program, Mrs. Prais served coffee and fancy pastries, decorated with an Easter motif.

The May meeting will be a working session at the Fred C. Fisher Library, when the gardens are given their annual spring cleanup.

Deadline for copy for next week's Suburban Living section will be 12 noon April 19.

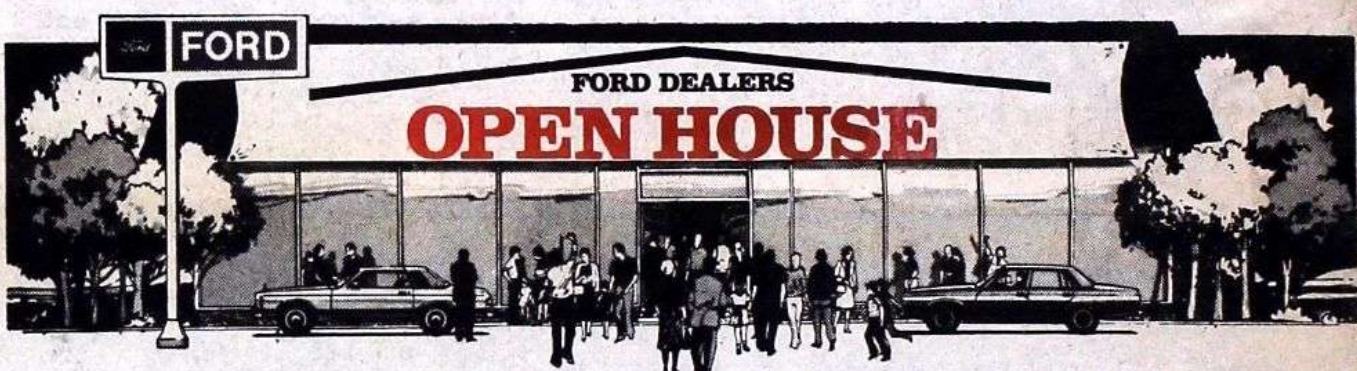

Plan for meeting

During the past few months, members of the Okmulgee-Dunbar Alumni Association have been holding meetings in preparation for their first "Reunion of the Classes", which will be held May 25. A banquet that evening will feature Professor Homer G. Randolph. On May 26 a wine-and-cheese reception and disco dance are planned for Airport Hilton Inn in Romulus, located on Merriman Road near the I-94 freeway. The cost of each activity will be $12.50 per person. Promoting the reunion are Mrs. Charles Willis (seated, from left), Mrs. Booker Hoover, Mrs. Otha Jones (standing, from left), Mrs. Andrew Butler and Mrs. O Gray. Poulenc's 'Carmelites' featured in Met visit Featured among the operas that will be performed by New York's Metropolitan Opera Company during their 1979 Tour Week in Detroit May 21-26 is Francis Poulenc's critically acclaimed work "Dialogues of the Carmelites".

This opera, written in 1957, is considered not only its composer's masterwork, but one of the most powerful and emotional operas of the 20th century. "Dialogues..." will be performed in English by the Met at Masonic Auditorium on May 22 at 8 p.m.

"Dialogues of the Carmelites" is based on an actual occurrence that happened on July 17, 1794, when, in one of the worst excesses of the French Revolution, a group of Carmelite nuns from Compiègne, near Paris, were publicly guillotined one by one as "enemies of the people".

The opera consists, literally, of a series of dialogues. The protagonists for the most part are nuns, young and old, of the Carmelite order. The interplay of events with their own consciences results in their martyrdom. They march to the guillotine secure and steadfast in their faith, but condemned by the revolutionaries as enemies of the people.

The success of "Dialogues" has been universal, not only in some of the world's leading opera houses, but also over television, having been televised by the NBC Opera Company over NBC-TV on Dec. 8, 1957, when it received the New York Music Critics Circle Award. Probably, it attains its heights of eloquence in its religious music, particularly in the a cappella "Ave Maria" sung almost sotto voce at the end of Act II, and the "Salve Regina", which the nuns sing as they make their way to the guillotine.

Of particular interest to Detroiters will be the appearance of mezzo-soprano Maria Ewing in the leading role of Blanche Ms. Ewing, a native Detroit, was the winner of 1970 Grinnell Scholarship Auditions sponsored by the Detroit Grand Opera Association. She attended the Cleveland Institute of Music and studied with Marjorie Gordon, Eleanor Steber, Jennie Tourel and Otto Guth. She has been heard in operatic performances at Glyndebourne, Santa Fe, Chicago, Ravinia, the Netherlands Festival and Cologne, and with the symphony orchestras of Philadelphia, Chicago, Pittsburgh, and Los Angeles.

The complete cast of "Dialogues of the Carmelites" is Ms. Ewing as Blanche, Regine Crespin as Mme.

De Croissy, Clarice Carson as Mme. Lidoine, Mignon Dunn as Mother Marie, Raymond Gibbs as Chevalier, Jerome Hines as Marquis, Betsy Norden as Sister Constance, Jean Kraft as Mother Jean, Betsy Godfrey as Sister Mathilde, James Atherton as Confessor, Charles Anthony as the first commissioner, Nico Castel as Thierry, Russell Christopher as the second commissioner-officer, Gene Boucher as Javelinot, Mario Bertolino as the jailer and Richard Woitach as the conductor.

UM Guild sets spring art festival

The University of Michigan Artists and Craftsmen Guild will celebrate spring and the creative spirit with a Spring Arts Festival May 5 and 6.

This year the free exhibit and sale will be held in the University of Michigan-Dearborn Field House, 4901 Evergreen Road, Dearborn. Hours May 5 are 10 a.m. to 8 p.m. On May 6, the show is open from 12 noon to 5 p.m.

Spring images from more than 100 members of the guild will emerge in the delicate blossoms of Oriental brush painting, hand carved wooden birds, ceramic apple mugs, stained glass a three-dimensional dragon fly and a parade of soft fabric stuffed ducklings, chicks and other animal friends.

Guild rules for exhibiting at art fairs encourage creative exploration and growth in both functional and decorative work. Members maintain a strong concern for quality workmanship and function as well as beauty.

The spring show in Dearborn will feature many views of nature and artistic visions in watercolor, oil, acrylic painting; clay and metal sculpture, stained glass; photography; glass blowing; woodcarving; and jewelry.

The guild is committed to the promotion, development and cultivation of contemporary arts and crafts. Located at the University of Michigan, the Guild has a special commitment to the presentation of artwork to the U-M community and the development of student artists. They sponsor three other annual art fairs, including the Annual Summer Arts Festival held in July in Ann Arbor.

Musical entertainment and food service will add to the festivities at this new event for the Dearborn community. The U of M-D Field House is located on Evergreen Road, just across from the Fairlane Town Center.

For additional information, contact the Artists and Craftsmen Guild in Ann Arbor at 763-4430.

Bonstelle stages 'Eccentricities'

"The Eccentricities of a Nightingale," critically acclaimed rewrite by Tennessee Williams of his early play "Summer and Smoke," opens April 20 at Wayne State University's Bonstelle Theatre for a two-weekend run.

"Eccentricities" plays through April 29 with Friday and Saturday performances at 8:30 p.m. and Sunday matinees at 2 p.m.

The "nightingale" of the title refers to Alma Winemiller, a sensitive young woman whose complex, heart-breaking relationship with a young doctor forms the story of this moving play. Williams has called "Eccentricities" one of his favorite works, and Alma "one of my very best characters."

"Eccentricities" was written in 1951, prior to the London opening of "Summer and Smoke." That production already was into rehearsal when Williams arrived with his radically altered script. Too late for use, Williams left it with a friend in London and retrieved it years later. Regional productions in this country culminated in a PBS television production in 1975 and in 1976 "Eccentricities" opened on Broadway.

When it opened, Clive Barnes said it was "Williams at his most wonderful," and Martin Gottfried wrote, "The production delivers the special song for the human heart that only Williams could sing."

"The Duchess of Malfi," most famous play by John Webster, one of Shakespeare's most talented contemporaries, opens officially April 25 at 8:30 p.m. at Wayne State University's Hilberry Theatre.

Tickets and information for "The Duchess of Malfi" and other Wayne State productions may be obtained from the office at Cass and Hancock, Detroit 48202, Hilberry Theatre box or by calling 577-2972.
